U. S. Officials Ready to Ask Troops to End N. J. Strike

Belief Here Roosevelt Would Grant Request To Enforce WLB Ruling Denying Boost

By Thomas F. Reynolds
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Administration labor officials have determined to ask for troops, if necessary, to enforce the first challenged War Labor Board decision supporting President Roosevelt's anti-inflation policy.

Although the decision has not yet reached the White House, officials in charge of the Administration labor-wage policies are ready to use armed force if necessary to break a "wildcat strike" of 1000 workers at the General Cable Corp. plant at Bayonne, N. J.

The War Labor Board, it was understood, still is hopeful that pacific settlement of the dispute can be reached. But, unless a settlement is achieved in the next 48 hours, a test of WLB powers is in prospect, and it was almost certain that Mr. Roosevelt would be asked to send troops into the plant.

Keeping Eye on Situation

The President is maintaining steady support of legitimate complaints of labor. But both he and his labor officials are determined that no unauthorized walkouts shall slow down maximum production for the war. While Mr. Roosevelt on Tuesday sharply rebuffed suggestions that labor difficulties were getting out of hand, he still was keeping a close eye on the labor situation and was ready to take drastic action if necessary to keep production rolling.

It was believed almost certain that should WLB request troops in the General Cable Corp. strike, Mr. Roosevelt would grant the request quickly.

Davis Appeals to Strikers

Some 1000 workers of the Bayonne war plant walked out Tuesday, demanding wage increases and vacations with pay. The dispute had been submitted to WLB July 1 by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and about ten days ago the workers' demands were rejected after Labor Board investigation.

William H. Davis, WLB chairman, appealed Tuesday night to the strikers to go back to work. Labor

U. S. to Try 7 Of 12 Spy Aides For Treason

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Attorney General Biddle said yesterday that 12 confederates of the German spies who were electrocuted last week would face indictment within the next 10 days.

All 12 have confessed knowingly aiding the spies.

At least seven will be charged with treason, for which the penalty can be death.

The Attorney General said where the evidence does not justify indictment for treason, the confederates will be accused under the Trading With the Enemy Act, providing 10 years in prison; the Foreign Agents Act of 1917, providing $5000 fine and 10 years in prison, and other appropriate laws.

United States Attorney J. Albert Woll, in Chicago, will ask grand jury action against six confederates of the spy, Herbert Haupt, and two accomplices of the spy, Hermann Neubauer.

Implicated with Haupt were his parents, Hans Max Haupt, 48, and Erna Haupt, 43; his uncle and aunt,

Doublets

Same Name, Same Day— What a Day!

Two scholarly men named Mikesell met in the waiting room in George Washington University Hospital yesterday afternoon and before they left their wives had presented each with twins.

The men were Raymond Mikesell, 29, of 4119 W Street Northwest, senior economist at the Office of Price Administration, and Alfred H. Mikesell, 28, a scientist at the Naval Observatory, of 8 Iroquois Road, Glen Echo, Md. They had never met before yesterday—but let Raymond Mikesell tell the story:

"I went to the hospital yesterday to await the birth of a child to be presented by my wife, Desyl. Sitting in the waiting room was another man. I had never seen nor heard of him in my life.

"I saw the nurses talking among themselves and after a while one of them said to me, 'Mr. Mikesell, I want you to meet Mr. Mikesell.'

Both Surprised

"Of course, I was surprised and so was he. Anyway, we shook hands and sat down and waited. We began to talk and we learned that we were there for the same purpose. We said it was rather coincidental and finally decided that we were distantly related. In fact I had heard of his father, who is head of the department of commerce, Fresno State College, while I was an instructor of economics at the University of Washington.

Mikesell said they chatted further about trival matters until his wife's

Rioting Fades In Bombay; Mills Resume

But Bloodshed Continues in Poona, New Delhi and Other Indian Cities

By the Associated Press

Bombay, Aug. 12.—The upheaval of riot and bloodshed which has marked Mohandas K. Gandhi's do-or-die movement showed signs of wearing itself out in its fifth day today, although gunfire twice resounded through Bombay's streets where violence has been at its height.

There was marked improvement in the attendance of millworkers in the factory area, train and tram services were fairly normal again, barricades erected in the streets by rioters were being pulled down, and the mill area presented an appearance of comparative quiet except for scattered incidents.

Violence still flared in many cities, however, and at Poona where Gandhi is interned, four persons were reported killed by gunfire late this afternoon. Ten were injured.

At Allahabad a curfew was imposed between 7 p. m. and 6 a. m. following a series of disturbances in which crowds attacked a police station, two police outposts, several branch postoffices and an air raid center. Two persons were killed by police bullets and a police superintendent and a district magistrate were injured by bricks.

(The India office in London issued a statement saying the authorities had the situation "completely in hand" and any picture of widespread disorder was "utterly distorted.")

In late afternoon troops were forced to fire on a crowd which had

U. S. Forces Ordered To Be Neutral in India

The State Department made it clear last night that American armed forces in India have been ordered to "exercise scrupulous care to avoid the slightest participation in India's internal political problems, or even the appearance of so doing."

Their sole purpose in India, the department said, is to prosecute the war against the Axis powers, and their primary aim in that area is to help China.

Mainz Fired And Blasted by RAF Bombers

Observers Use New Technique to Picture All of Huge Raid

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 12.—Picked bomber crews who circled over the German city of Mainz from start to finish of a heavy raid last night in a new technique of R. A. F. observation described tonight how the bursts of hundreds of tons of bombs flickered across the target like "lights on a pin table," and started more fires than they could count.

The Air Ministry news service's report of the stories related by these specially chosen observers said the bombs, including more than 50,000 incendiaries, blasted and enflamed the city, an important center and river port which handles most of the grain traffic in the Rhine-Mainz area.

The observation crews hovered over the city for 46 minutes while plane after plane roared in and dumped its bombs.

Ordinary British raids by no more than 200 planes now are dropping a

French Throw Bombs in Midst Of Nazi Fliers

2 Pilots Die, 18 Hurt; Plot to Blow Up Laval's Castle Is Disclosed

By Ralph Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, Aug. 12.—French dissidents lobbed grenades into a group of 60 German aviators exercising at the noted Bouin Stadium near Paris last Wednesday, killing two and wounding 18, to climax a week of turbulence that included an abortive scheme to blow up Government Chief Pierre Laval's castle at Chateldon, it can be revealed today.

It was feared the Germans would take fierce reprisals against "Communists" and other hostages held in jail and concentration camps under the recent threat to wipe out all male relatives, even cousins, of those convicted of terrorism.

(Although the dispatch did not mention executions for vollence, a Vichy dispatch last Monday said that 93 persons had been executed in France for new assaults and sabotage against the occupation forces and that German General Oberg, chief of the Elite Guard in occupied areas, threatened reprisals against the entire population if the outbreaks continued.

(The Monday dispatch did not disclose the attack on the aviators, possibly because of censorship, although it occurred five days previously and the mass executions could thus have been connected with it.)

The killers stalked the German fliers from behind a hedge encios-

Foe Driving Ahead Along Baku Railway

Only 200 Miles From Crozny Oilfields; Russians Holding Before Stalingrad

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Thursday), Aug. 13. German troops have punched another hole in Russian positions astride the Rostov-Baku railroad in the Cherkessk area, but the Red army is holding firmly on the approaches to Stalingrad, the Soviets announced early today.

"In the area of Cherkessk our troops have retired to new positions," the Russian communique said.

Cherkessk is 70 miles southeast of Armavir and about 200 miles from the rich Grozny oil fields, and the Germans thus are continuing their hard drive southeastward along the northern fringe of the Caucasian Mountains.

The Red army was still fighting heavy defensive battles in the Maikop oil fields west of Cherkessk and also at Krasnodar on the Kuban River 80 miles northwest of Maikop.

2000 Nazis Reported Killed

Nearly 2000 Germans were reported killed and 22 tanks destroyed during the last 24 hours in Nazi efforts to bridge a waterline (probably the Kuban) in the Krasnodar sector, the Russians said.

The apparent German goal in the west is twofold: To reach the Soviet Black Sea ports of Novorossisk and Taupse. A railroad from Krasnodar leads to the former and another spur from Maikop goes through 3000-foot mountains to Taupse.

Northwest of Stalingrad in the Don River bend the Red army was reported to have fought off repeated German attacks at Kletskaya and south of that city, which is 75 miles from Stalingrad. (The Germans claimed on Wednesday the capture of 57,000 Russians in this area, including most of the Sixty-second Red army.)

Germans Put on Defensive

South of the Don in the Kotelnikovski sector the Russians reported offensive successes.

The communique said the Germans in some regions had been forced onto the defensive and added:

American and Australian Planes Continue Attacks on Enemy's Air Fields, Shore Bases in Battle For Prized Harbor at Tulagi

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

United States Marines have landed on three of the Japanese-held Solomon Islands and are "consolidating their positions," the Navy announced in a communique last night.

The islands, the communique said, were in the "vicinity of Tulagi."

Tulagi, the big prize in America's first offensive of the war, is an island itself—about 2 miles long and fringed with palm trees. On either side of it are two larger islands, Florida and Guadalcanal. Australian dispatches said the full weight of the Allied offensive had been thrown at all three.

The Navy said naval vessels—American and Australian warships—supporting the landing of the Marines were engaged in "bitter fighting" with the Japanese. It added, however, that details were not yet available.

United States and Australian aircraft, the communique said, were continuing their attacks on enemy landing fields and shore-based aircraft.

United States Flying Fortresses, meanwhile, acted in support of the invasion force by heavily damaging four ships at Rabaul, New Britain, a base from which the Japs have sent help to their forces in the Solomons.

BATTLE LOCALE—United States Marines apparently have landed (1) on the Solomon Islands of Florida, Guadalcanal and Tulagi. Tulagi, as shown by inset (top, right), is a smaller island alongside Florida Island. Proximity of the Solomons to New Guinea and Australia is shown by other inset map. Japs first landed in the Solomons at Kieta January 25 and another base has been established at Buka (2)

A communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in Australia last night said three of the ships were left afire and the fourth sinking.

The Navy said there was "substantial evidence" that the Japanese had been rushing the building of a fortified base at Tulagi. In this connection it was recalled that the late Admiral Jellicoe, British Grand Fleet commander in the last war, said enthusiastically that Tulagi could "accommodate the entire British navy."

The communique concluded by saying that it was impossible at this time to elaborate further on American operations in the Solomons because the warships and ground forces involved were using their radio communications for battle purposes.

First Official Word Since King's Statement

The communique, numbered 104, was the first official word issued on the big amphibious offensive since Monday's statement by Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander in Chief of the United States Fleet, in which he disclosed that the Marines had landed, that one American cruiser had been sunk, five American ships damaged, and told the Nation to be prepared for considerable losses.

Navy spokesmen would not elaborate on the communique last night. It seemed apparent, however, that if the Marines were "consolidating" their positions, they had won a real grip on the islands.

Vice Admiral Robert Lee Ghormley's task from here on would be to throw in American reinforcements and use his warships and aircraft to keep out Japanese reinforcements, meantime, using naval rifles and aerial bombs to pulverize the enemy positions.

If the Marines could seize one of the Japanese air fields in the battle area, it would be of vast advantage to them. Then MacArthur's fighter planes could enter the fray. As matters stand, the distances would seem to be too great for fighter planes of the land variety, and Admiral Ghormley must be depending entirely on fighter planes from his aircraft carriers.

Text of Navy's Communique

The text of the Navy's communique follows:

"1. Operations in the Solomons are still in progress.

"2. It has been confirmed that the United States Marines have landed as scheduled in three islands in the vicinity of Tulagi. The Marines are engaged in consolidating their positions. Supporting naval forces have been engaged in bitter fighting, details of which are not yet available. United States Army and Australian aircraft are continuing attacks on

Sir Walter is reading a picture magazine 30 feet above the floor. The suave, bearded Sir Walter came by the magazine when a Capitol guard hurled it at a pigeon. By a million-to-one chance it caught on the sculptured design in front of Sir Walter. Guide signs warning pedestrians to use crosswalks were placed in busy Post Square yesterday, following the death of a 73-year-old woman who was hit by a streetcar on Tuesday.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer also appeared at the intersection and instructed a special policeman to caution walkers to travel only in the painted pedestrian lanes.

Miss Mary E. Boland, 73, of 928 L Street Northwest, a public stenographer, was fatally injured during the rush hour Tuesday when she was struck by a trolley while crossing wide Pennsylvania Avenue, not at a crosswalk.

She suffered a fractured skull, an autopsy disclosed yesterday. Following the post-mortem, a coroner's jury was sworn in and an inquest was scheduled for 11:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Alfred V. Cobb, 33, of 7534 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, the motorman of the car, who has had just two months' experience, will appear at the hearing. He was released in custody of a company attorney after the mishap.

Statistics at Police Headquarters yesterday revealed that Miss Boland was the nineteenth person killed in streetcar and bus accidents in Washington so far this year.

Compared with the total number of traffic fatalities—64—this figure is 29.4 per cent of the total, an alarming fact considering that these vehicles comprise less than 1 per cent of the number of automobiles registered here.

Seventeen of the deaths attributed to public transportation vehicles have been of pedestrians, all but three of whom have been more

U. S. Fighter Pilots, Eager For Action, Arrive in Egypt

By the United Press

Cairo, Aug. 12.—American fighter pilots have arrived on the Egyptian battle front and are ready to pitch into Marshal Rommel's desert forces along with United States tanks and bombers, it was revealed tonight.

The United States Army Air Forces Regulars and Reserve officers recalled from civil pursuits got a more than cordial welcome. A Royal Air Force squadron leader observed after watching them try out their Curtis Kitty Hawks:

"These boys certainly can fly. They did things with their Kitty Hawks which I never knew could be done."

The fighter pilots reached Egypt two months after United States Army bombers went into action over the desert and the Mediterranean. American tank units moved up to forward positions late in July after an intense training period behind the lines, and were described as waiting impatiently for a "whack at the Jerries."

Meanwhile, a Middle Eastern command communique said imperial patrols inflicted casualties on Axis "working parties" in the northern sector of the El Alamein Front Monday night. Ground operations were confined yesterday to artillery exchanges, and air activity was hampered by sandstorms, it added.

(Today's Italian high command communique said one enemy plane was shot down by antiaircraft fire during raids on Tobruk and other Libyan towns, and that eight other aircraft were destroyed by Axis formations in encounters over the desert.

(The communique acknowledged that British raids on Satania, Sicily, and the Province of Cagliari Sardinia, caused some casualties.)

the enemy, not giving him a chance to consolidate."

Soviet tankmen supported by artillery and aircraft killed 700 Germans and destroyed 16 tanks and other valuable equipment when falling upon a Nazi column, the communique said.

Far to the north on the upper Don the Russians said their troops fighting on the west bank of the river in the Voronezh sector had killed another 500 Germans in two days. Earlier, the Russians had reported the capture of five villages on the west bank.

"On a neighboring sector street fighting took place in one populated locality," the midnight communique said.

Whole towns and forests were ablaze as the battle tide in the Kuban River country of the Caucasian foothills menaced the region of Pyatigorsk and the Grozny oil fields beyond, following the German break-through in the Cherkessk sector.

The plan of the whole German campaign in the Caucasus is to push down the railway which crosses the peninsula from northwest to southeast. This is the communications lifeline of all the land lying north of the Caucasian range.

There are three ways to the Baku oil wealth on the Caspian: the first along the rail line from Rostov; the second along the Sukhum highway to the Black Sea, thence by railroad or highway along the southern side of the great Caucasian range; the third by cutting across the mountains themselves at two or three places.

Using Ambush Tactics

It was no secret that the Russians were greatly outnumbered on virtually every sector of the fast-developing battle area.

Cossacks, fighting for their hearthstones, were resorting to ambush tactics in the face of the superior numbers. They were using every available object of shelter—even, in one case, ambushing a big German tank column from one of the gay fields of sunflowers which are so dear to the heart of every Cossack.

But since the battle days of Rostov—from which the Germans have moved more than 250 miles southward in 16 days—the German air force has rained tons of bombs on the Red army fighters of the north Caucasus. Every fresh attack has been preceded by dive bombing of Russian lines and communications. These planes the Cossacks cannot ambush.

The presence of Alpine units in the Cherkessk area also led to speculation as to whether the Nazis would try to get over the Caucasus via the ancient Sukhum military road, winding southward from Cherkessk to Sukhum on the Black Sea. This old road is a primitive mountain trail in some parts and is fit for automobiles in others, but with the kind of gambles the Germans are taking in the southern campaign, anything is possible.

enemy landing fields and shore-based aircraft.

"3. There is substantial evidence that the Japanese had planned and had well under way the development of an enemy base in the Tulagi area.

"4. Until more details are available it is impossible to elaborate further on these operations. All available communication facilities are overtaxed by urgent messages concerning operations."

Admiral King made it clear some time ago that he did not want his commanders to bother about reports to Washington so long as radios were needed in essential operations.

The Battle of the Solomons apparently was a leading topic of conversation when President Roosevelt met the Pacific War Council yesterday.

Leaving the White House, Dr. T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister, said the attack was a "good enough token" of the offensive spirit.

"We are very much encouraged," Soong said, "that the Americans have taken the offensive. It is the first time we are hitting the Japanese and have gone from the defensive to the offensive."

He added a pun, "I hope we are offensive enough to them."

Dr. A. Boudoin, Dutch Ambassador, followed up Soong's statement with the comment that "I quite share that feeling of encouragement."

Tokyo Insists Battle Is All Over

The Chinese newspapers in Chungking praised the offensive and suggested that it might divert Japan from attacks on Siberia and India.

"This timely American move," said the official Central Daily News, "may have the effect of shattering the Japanese militarists' dream of cashing in on Russian reverses and worsening of Anglo-Indian relations.

"The battle also is significant as showing the existence of unified strategy among the Allies.

"Furthermore, it indicates the possibility that America is ready to eliminate Japan first in this war."

A Domei broadcast from Tokyo pictured the Battle of the Solomon Islands as a struggle at such close quarters that United States and Japanese warships actually collided.

The broadcast, purporting to quote information from Capt. Shoichi Kamada, Japanese naval spokesman at Shanghai, insisted that the battle was over and was merely a one-night encounter.

The London Evening Star reported in a dispatch from Sydney, Australia, that the Marines who landed in the Solomons were using tanks and special types of artillery put ashore from assault barges.

There were other reports from Australia that the Marines might have used parachute troops in their assault on the islands.

greater weight of bombs on Germany than the Germans managed to hurl in their heaviest night assaults on Britain, an R. A. F. commentator declared. He warned, however, that by pulling planes from the Russian front the Nazis could make 1000-bomber attacks on Britain if it suited their policy.

The Nazi propaganda minister, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, expressed the same thought in an article appearing Wednesday in the magazine Das Reich and extensively quoted by the Berlin radio.

Germany must endure "emporarfly painful wounds" while concentrating all her forces in the East for a decisive victory, Goebbels said. Afterward, he said, "when our hands will be completely free again, we shall be able to give that answer to the British which they deserve."

The Air Ministry announced the loss of 16 British planes in the Mainz raid, indicating it might have been a 300 or 400 plane attack, since previous losses have been 4 or 5 per cent or less.

The R. A. F. commentator in reviewing the increasing British assaults on Germany, said that even in the "ordinary" raid by less than 200 planes on Osnabruck last Sunday night, more than 450 tons of bombs were dropped, including 50 4000-pound "block-busters," 70 to 80 1-ton bombs, and many incendiaries.

Walter Wilhelm Froehling, 40, and Lucille Froeling, 32, and two family friends, Otto Richard Wergin, 46, and Emma Wergin, 44. All six now are held in default of $50,000 bonds.

The Department of Justice announced on July 13 that the Haupts and the Froehlings hid money for Haupt and that his parents bought him an automobile to haul dynamite in. The Wergins offered Haupt a hiding place in their home and he met another spy there on several occasions.

Implicated with Neubauer were Harry Jaques, 47, and his wife, Emma Jaques, 41, who hid $3600 for the spy.

N. Y. Official to Act

United States Attorney Mathias Correa will ask a New York grand jury for indictments against Helmut Leiner, 33, implicated with the spy, Edward John Kerling, 33; Anthony Cramer, 42, who hid $3670 for the spy, Werner Thiel, 35, and Hedwig Engeman, 34, who changed money for Kerling.

Leiner, an active bund member, was on a list of contacts given Kerling by the Nazi high command when he was sent to this country by submarine two months ago.

United States Attorney T. Albert Woll will proceed before a Brooklyn grand jury against Herman Heinrich Faje, 36, who concealed $3600 for the spy, Heinrich Heinck, 35.

Attorney General Biddle said two more persons linked to the spies would remain in custody as dangerous aliens, but that no criminal prosecution appeared justified. These were Kerling's wife, Maria Kerling, 38, a Nazi Party member, and Ernst Hermann Kerkhof, 36, who has been intimately associated with Mrs. Kerling for about a year.

Speed in Future Promised

The Attorney General said spies caught in the future might expect prompt judgment at the hands of courts-martial or military commissions established by the Army. The President's war powers, he recalled, were fully acknowledged by the Supreme Court when the court refused to receive petitions for writs of habeas corpus offered by counsel for seven of the spies recently convicted.

Biddle said this established the law and redefined civil rights, when balanced by military necessity, in terms of modern warfare. The Department of Justice, he added, probably would have no part in future spy trials.

Two spies were spared by the President when the other six were electrocuted. The Attorney General said these were being turned over to the Department of Justice and would be confined in some penitentiary, being kept apart for their own protection. These two spies, who informed on the others, will be called as witnesses in the prospective treason trials.

Meanwhile, in Indianapolis yesterday, the Silver Shirter, William Dudley Pelley was sentenced to 15 years in prison for seditious conspiracy. Federal Judge Robert C. Baltzell recalled that Pelley once hoped to emulate Hitler and Mussolini with his "shirt" organization.

Pelley is due to be tried in Washington in October for conspiring with 27 others against the Army and Navy.

Sentenced with Pelley in Indianapolis were his accomplices, Lawrence A. Brown, who was given five years in prison, and Agnes Martin Henderson, whose two-year sentence was probated, with the warning that it would be boosted to five years if she misbehaved. Pelley's Fellowship Press, Inc., was fined $5000.

ing the Bouin Stadium, reports said, and hurled their grenades as the group trotted past in conditioning exercises. One pilot was killed instantly, another died on the way to a hospital and eight of the wounded were reported gravely hurt.

The killers escaped although the Germans immediately cordoned off the entire quarter and raided possible hiding places.

The plan to blast Laval's castle in the unoccupied zone was said to have been brought to light when police in Clermont-Ferrand, 30 miles away, found a cache of 45 pounds of dynamite. All police leaves in the region of Vichy, Clermont-Ferrand and Chateldon were suspended immediately.

The week was marked also by a successful dynamiting of the lock gates of the north canal at Tergnier in the Aisne department, occupied northeast France. The action blocked that busy waterway to coal barges and other Paris-bound traffic for 48 hours. Boldly approaching the canal in daylight, the saboteurs hurled their bombs against the gate and blasted off its hinges.

Other wreckers pulled up the rails of the main line between Charmes and Rambervilliers near Epinal in the Vosges but the damage was discovered in time to prevent a derailment.

Patriots threw bombs in the front windows of the collaborationist morning paper Effort at Lyons, wounding stenographer, in protest of the publication's support of the drive to recruit labor for Germany.

The Effort is directed by Paul Rives, one-time associate of Socialist Premier Leon Blum and now a backer of Marshal Petain and the Laval collaboration policy.

Another bomb attack was made on the German labor recruiting bureau in the Parisian suburb, Chelles.

The Germans executed two Frenchmen, aged 22 and 41, at Pointers after the Gestapo found Communist handbills in their homes. A woman was killed by a German sentry at St. Cyr, France's West Point, when he fired into an automobile whose driver did not heed his command to halt.

stoned a military truck, and again when a mob attempted to destroy a postoffice box in the Zaveri Bazaar. There were casualties in the first instance, but none in the second.

Police said the bulk of the rowdyism in Bombay could be traced to not more than 50 persons using students and others to keep it going. So far few members of Gandhi's Congress Party had taken part, officers asserted.

The Congress Party press also asserted the rioters contained few if any genuine congressmen.

31 Dead 250 Wounded

So far the toll of violence stood at 31 dead and 250 wounded in Bombay alone, but incomplete reports from other places in India indicated that at least 56 had been killed and probably 300 injured.

At the moment the unrest in New Delhi appeared to be more intense than in Bombay. Additional troops were sent to New Delhi to meet what was officially described as an "ugly" situation.

A large crowd put the torch to the town hall there and burned the income tax office, and most serious of all a Moslem subinspector of police was slain by the crowd, an act considered dangerous because it might set off Moslem-Hindu clashes.

The deaths of 12 persons in New Delhi had been announced, and another person was reported killed when police fired a volley into a crowd attempting to break into the postoffice at Pharganj this afternoon. There were many wounded in hospitals.

The big industrial city of Calcutta, with its war-important mills, was quieter, but elsewhere from India came these reports:

Cawnpore—Two branch postoffices looted and police fire killed one person.

Lucknow—Postoffices sacked and Lucknow University closed.

Patna—Five killed, 14 injured when soldiers fired into a crowd of 2000 marching on the provincial government seat.

Madras—Three killed, 22 injured by shooting Monday, and others injured the next day.

Agra—Three wounded by police fire, Hindu shops closed and schools picketed.

Wardha—One shooting incident.

Nagpur—Some stores reopened and many workers went back to their jobs, but schools were still closed.

Gun to Boomerang

Philadelphia, Aug. 12 (AP).—As its contribution to the scrap drive Houston Post, American Legion, presented a 77-millimeter German field gun of the first World War vintage to the Army today.

"The gun will be returned to its original owners in the form of ammunition," said Herbert L. Gutterson, chief of the War Production Board's salvage division.

physician, Dr. Robert Harmon, entered the waiting room. It was 3:40 p. m.

"'Mr. Mikesell,' he said, "'I have some good news for you. Your wife has presented you with twins—boys!'"

"Well, the shock was so great, I don't know what I did," Mikesell related. "I guess I turned white and then pink. The other Mr. Mikesell congratulated me and then all of us began kidding and joking. Then I said to Mr. Mikesell, 'well, it only remains now for your wife to have twins.' But, he simply laughed and said let's go out to get something to eat."

Mikesell said they went to a restaurant and then returned to the waiting room.

"Soon after that," Mikesell said, "Dr. H. S. Murphy came out and approached the other Mr. Mikesell He said, "Well, Mr. Mikesell, I have some good news for you. Your wife has just presented you with twins—girls!"

"Well, you can imagine how we felt. That was at 4:25 p. m., just a little less than a hour after I had received word from Dr. Harmon. Mr. Mikesell was almost speechless, and so was I."

Raymond and Mrs. Mikesell have been in Washington for about eight months. He is on leave from the University of Washington for the duration. Alfred and Mrs. Mikesell have lived here for about six years.

The twins are the first children for either Mikesell family.

1,044,741 Russians Taken Since Spring, Berlin Reports

(Dispatches from enemy countries are published with the warning that they frequently contain misleading information intended for propaganda purposes.)

By the Associated Press

Berlin (from German Broadcasts), Aug. 12.—The German high command announced today that the battle of the Big Don Bend has ended with the destruction of the mass of the Sixty-second Soviet army and said 1,044,741 Soviet soldiers had been captured since the beginning of fighting this spring.

Of the present fighting, the Germans announced the capture by Rumanian troops of the "stubbornly defended" town of Slavyansk, about 25 miles northwest of Krasnodar in the caucasus, and declared the German forces were advancing deeper into the Caucasus Mountains.

The high command said the Russians, after a prolonged interval, renewed relief attacks northwest of Voronezh, at the top of the critical southern front.

It added that attacks by numerically superior Soviet forces had been repulsed in the Rzhev area, 130 miles northwest of Moscow and other Russian attacks southeast of Lake Ilmen and on the Volkhov front were frustrated.

(Today's report raised to at least 4,908,412 Russian prisoners the total reported by Adolf Hitler and the high command since Germany invaded Russia June 22, 1941. Last December 11, in declaring war against the United States, Hitler said Russian prisoners up to December 1 totaled 3,806,865. The high command on February 22 announced 56,806 Russian prisoners had been taken between January 1 to February 20. This last report was described as a summary of the period since winter interrupted the German offensive.)

In its summary of fighting since the beginning of the Battle of Kerch, when the German spring drive began, the high command said the German and allied troops captured or destroyed 6271 tanks (bringing the total figure claimed for the year to at least 28,622) and 10,131 guns of every kind (raising the total for this category to at least 44,461 for the war).

During the same period, the Germans said, 4900 Soviet planes were destroyed in aerial combat, 664 were brought down by antiaircraft guns and 432 destroyed on the ground.

(This total of planes said to have been downed or destroyed raised the all-war total announced by the Germans to at least 24,570 Russian planes.)

German Victory Stories Exaggerated, London Asserts

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 12.—British military sources declared today that Russia's resistance is stiffening on all fronts and that Soviet attacks at Voronezh and Rzhev are beginning to worry the Germans despite sweeping Nazi claims of victories on the southern front.

These military sources, who declined to be identified, discounted the German victory claims as greatly exaggerated. They pointed out further that special announcements often are made by the Nazis for political effect at home and sometimes are not factual.

The German high command figure of 1,044,741 Red army prisoners in the spring and summer campaigns was called "highly improbable" by the British in view of the proven adroitness of Marshal Semeon Timoshenko in disengaging his armies from German traps.

Persistent mention by the Germans of heavy defensive fighting in the Rzhev area, 130 miles northwest of Moscow, aroused unofficial speculation in London that the Russians might be undertaking a counter-offensive in the hope of diverting German strength from the southern armies.

That too has been the aim of Russian attacks about Voronezh, the northern end of the critical southern front.

It was noted here that the Russians have said little about the Rzhev action, which has been in progress 13 days.

The Vichy radio announced yesterday that the Russians had made a breach in the German position there. The German radio today announced that the Red army had sent "special reinforcements" there and the German high command communique spoke of "numerically superior" Russian forces in the same sector.

War Sidelights

Guard Ill, Pilots Seize Plane, Flee

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Four R. A. F. men who were being flown as prisoners from Sicily to Taranto, Italy, escaped by commandeering the Italian plane and flying to Malta when their guard became air sick, the British radio reported today.

The broadcast, heard here by C. B. S., said the R. A. F. men now had reached Cairo after "one of the most amusing escape stories of the war."

Woman Heads Crew

Moscow, Aug. 12 (AP).—The appearance of the first woman captain of a Volga River steamer was reported today by the Government newspaper Izvestia. She is Capt. Maria Popova, commanding the Red Banner Bearer and a crew of only three men, a navigator, a machinist and a machinist's assistant.

Brings Home the Words

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), Aug. 12 (AP).—Three ponderous American dictionaries, each of which cost $30, are Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura's only homecoming gifts, the former Japanese Ambassador to the United States disclosed today aboard the repatriation ship Asama Maru.

His only explanation for his weighty choice of souvenier was the mystic comment to an Asahi correspondent that he was sure "English dictionaries will become more important and necessary in the future in order to know more not only about our enemy but for our own selves."

He intends one for the Wakayama Middle School where he studied, another for the Peers School and is undecided to whom to give the third. Asahi said he had no gift for his wife.

Long Distance Romeo

Passaic, N. J., Aug. 12 (AP).—Sergt. Walter Tripp of Kearny celebrated his birthday by proposing to his sweetheart—by telephone from Hawaii.

It cost him $19.80, but he got the right answer. So he and Miss Jeannette Deck of Passaic will be married if the Army will approve his request to be transferred to an officers' training school in the United States.

Volunteer, 61, Rejected

West New York, N. J., Aug. 12 (AP). The Army has rejected the offer of James Tito, 61, to be a $1-a-year soldier.

Tito wrote President Roosevelt last month asking permission to reenlist for active duty. Yesterday, on the silver anniversary of his enlistment in World War I, the rejection letter came.

Maj. Gen. J. A. Ulio of the Adjutant General's office, Washington, suggested that Tito volunteer for civilian defense work. He wrote that it would be impracticable because of Tito's age to consider favorably his enlistment request.

Two Navy Fliers Hurt in Crash Near Clinton, Md.

Two Navy fliers were seriously injured when a two-seater training plane crashed on a road about 3 miles southeast of Clinton, Md., at 2:30 p. m. yesterday, the Navy announced.

They are Ensign Edward C. Willingham, 24, of 1516 V Street Southeast and Aviation Cadet Robert F. Willkie, 21, whose address is listed as Prospect, Ky. Both were removed to the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md.

Officials said the accident occurred on a "routine" flight but cause of the crash was not immediately determined.

The Navy Department said Ensign Willingham lists his home address in care of the general agent, Atlantic Coast Line, Norfolk, Va. He has been living at the V Street address for about three weeks, it was said.

Formosa Bombed, Chinese Say

By the United Press

Chungking, Aug. 12.—Unconfirmed reports received here said today that Allied planes, presumably American, have bombed the large Japanese island of Formosa off the south China coast.

The island, called Taiwan by the Japanese, is 150 miles off the China coast and is 250 miles north of the Philippine Island of Luzon.

The Japanese who invaded the Philippines were reported to have come from there. The island is believed to be garrisoned by large Japanese forces.

A Chinese war communique, meanwhile, said the Japanese holding the airfield town of Chuhsien, on the Hangchow-Nanchang railroad in Chekiang Province, were reinforced by 2000 troops on August 4 and that on the following day they started a drive against Chinese troops.

The Japanese, supported by six artillery pieces and six airplanes, were halted by Chinese forces north of the city in fighting which continued until August 6, the communique said.

Fighting is continuing in the southern suburbs of Linchwan, in Kiangsi Province 50 miles southeast of Nanchang, the communique said.

South Atlantic Sub, Raider Drive Hinted

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 12.—Indications that the Axis is starting a strong surface-raider and submarine campaign in the south Atlantic were reported by British naval sources today while the Germans said a great British convoy was now under attack in the western Mediterranean.

The British Admiralty announced loss of the 22,600-ton aircraft carrier Eagle in the Mediterranean and said at least one enemy submarine operating in the same area already had been sunk, but did not refer to a convoy attack.

Later the Admiralty said 930 survivors including Capt. L. D. Mackintosh, the commander, had been accounted for in this fifth carrier loss since the war began. Apparently most of the men were saved, for the normal complement of the carrier was only 748.

Captain Mackintosh previously had served on three other aircraft carriers, the Courageous, Glorious and Hermes, all of which have been sunk.

The Germans, reporting they sank the Eagle Tuesday with four torpedo hits, said she was a member of the convoy escort, which included the bulk of the British Mediterranean fleet and was en route east from Gibraltar.

The Italians claimed they had hit another warship in convoy.

The Eagle, started in 1913 as a battleship for Chile, was completed as a British aircraft carrier in 1924. In peacetime she carried 748 men and 21 planes.

Britain is left with five carriers. Two more, the Implacable and Indefatigable, are due for completion this year.

The extension of Axis offensive operations into the South Atlantic was noted by naval sources as a further step in the battle of supply. That ocean is the chief route from America to India and Egypt as well as an important line to Russia via Iran and for British meat and wheat shipments from South America.

These naval sources cited Rio de Janeiro dispatches and Axis claims as indications that surface and submarine raids already were in progress. Rio reports said two or three ships had been attacked by a suface raider since Saturday. S O S messages giving the location 1000 miles off Brazil. Also noted were German claims to have sunk more than 45,000 tons of shipping bound for Egypt off the American and West African coasts recently.

The Germans today claimed to have sunk a British steamer en route from South Africa to England and an American freighter off Florida, the lattter by "gunfire."

The British naval sources speculated that probably one German surface raider and strong submarine forces were operating in the South Atlantic.

One naval source said a number of armed Axis merchant raiders had gone to the South Atlantic from Bay of Biscay ports since the fall of France.

Correspondent Missing in Pacific

VERN HAUGLAND

A.P. Reporter Lost on Flight Into War Zone

By the Associated Press

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Australia, Aug. 12.—Vern Haugland, 34, Associated Press staff man, was listed as missing today five days after a plane in which he was a passenger disappeared in a storm. The plane was en route from northeast Australia to the New Guinea war front.

There still was hope that the plane might have made an emergency landing at some inaccessible spot in New Guinea or on one of the islets off Australia. It was recalled here that several airmen who have been shot down or forced down over New Guinea have taken weeks to make their way back to civilization.

Haugland, 34, had waited at Townsville, Australia, for several days for transportation to New Guinea. The opportunity came August 7, when by a toss of a coin he won a seat in the leading plane of several that were to make the trip. An Australian reporter who lost the toss boarded the second plane.

Some distance from Townsville the planes ran into a storm. When they emerged, the first and second planes were missing. The second eventually reached a New Guinea base safely, but nothing has been heard from the other.

Haugland's desire to see and write about the war at first hand had carried him across 10,000 miles of the Pacific to Australia in the first big United States convoy to make that trip. He left the United States in January and was the first member of the present Australian bureau of the Associated Press to reach that war theater.

A native of Litchfield, Minn., Haugland was graduated from Montana State College in 1931.

A month later he got his first newspaper job on the Missoula Sentinel and Daily Missoulan. Two years later he went to the Montana Standard at Butte. In 1936 he joined the Associated Press bureau at Salt Lake City, Utah. In 1939 he was transferred to the A. P. bureau in Los Angeles.

WLB to Act Fast In Steel Pay Case

Full Board to Begin Hearings Tuesday; Davis and Steelman Agree on Procedure

Quick action on the C. I. O.'s demands for union maintenance, check-off and a 44 cents a day wage increase from the United States Steel Corp. was promised yesterday by the War Labor Board as it received the dispute—its biggest case—by certification from the Department of Labor.

The board announced plans to hold a public hearing on the dispute next Tuesday before the full board—an unusual procedure which skips the preliminary fact finding stages. The procedure was selected because the data collected in the "little steel" case recently decided by the board can apply also to United States Steel—"big steel." The C. I. O. union—the United States Workers of America — is demanding exactly what it received from the board in the "little steel" case, including retroactive pay to last February.

250,000 Involved

A total of 250,000 employes is involved, compared with the 157,000 affected by the "little steel" decision.

Other wage developments yesterday included the following:

1. Announcement by WLB of a 4 cents an hour increase for men and 3 cents an hour for women retroactive to March 1 for 400 employes of the Cambridge Tile Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati, Ohio. The increase was based on the "little steel" wage stabilization formula.

The members of the board split on this decision by a vote of 5 to 4 over the refusal of the majority of the board to grant a 5 cents an hour bonus to workers on the night shift as demanded by the C. I. O. Federation of Glass, Ceramic and Silica Sand Workers of America. Public Member Wayne L. Morse split off from the usually solid public bloc to join with the labor members against the two other voting members and the three employer members.

Agreement Reached

2. An agreement between William H. Davis, chairman of WLB, and Dr. John R. Steelman, director of the Department of Labor Conciliation Service, to permit WLB to review voluntary agreements between employers and labor reached with the aid of Steelman's organization. This was viewed as a step toward Government control of voluntary wage increases.

In splitting from the board majority on the Cambridge Tile case, Morse charged that the board was acting "inconsistent with prior decisions . . . in comparable cases." He cited other board decisions which stated that extra pay was merited for night work because of the inconvenient nature of the night shift. The board panel which heard the case had recommended that the demand for a shift differential be denied on the ground that the company could not afford to pay it.

Firm Can't Pay Increase

"It is true that the record of the instant case shows that the ability of the company to pay substantial wage increases is not good," Morse stated. "However, that fact does not justify discriminating against the night employes in the company's plant and thereby creating what amounts to a wage inequality within the plant."

Davis in discussing the board's decision in the Westinghouse case where the board had reviewed a voluntary agreement made by both parties before the Conciliation Service, stated that the board planned to follow that procedure in all such cases where application of the board's "little steel" wage stabilization formula was in question. In that way, he pointed out, the board would be able to assure other Government agencies that the wage adjustment was made in accordance with the formula. The Office of Price Administration has declined to recognize wage increases made since last April in calculating prices except where they have been approved by WLB.

Formula Not Violated

Davis stated that in ordering a 5½-cent-an-hour wage increase in the Westinghouse case, it had satisfied itself that the increase would not violate the formula.

"It should be made clear," he said, "that we have not decided to allow everybody a wage increase of 5½ cents an hour. In consultation with Dr. Steelman, we have devised a scheme of general application, but we are going to make sure that all increases are within the formula."

In commenting on this development, Steelman stated that he had ordered all his conciliators in the field to apply the "little steel" formula to all cases coming before it.

33 More Aliens Arrested by FBI in Baltimore

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 12.—Thirty-three enemy aliens were in the hands of the FBI today charged with failing to comply with the Alien Enemy Registration Act and scheduled for immediate hearings.

Taken with the 33—18 Germans and 15 Italians—were several powerful short-wave radio receiving sets, cameras, binoculars, guns and ammunition, the FBI announced.

The arrests, the FBI said, were made late yesterday and early today.

United States Attorney Bernard J. Flynn said the roundup was the first step of a "concerted drive" to clean up "all violators of the Alien Enemy Registration Act."

Those against whom sufficient evidence is found, Flynn announced, would be sent to Fort Howard for the action of the alien enemy hearing board there.

E. A. Soucy, FBI chief here, revealed the roundup was the result of more than five months investigation by him and his men and that they were assisted by State, county and municipal police.

The aliens were accused of such things as failing to give correct addresses, possessing forbidden articles and not applying for certificates of identification.

Failure to comply with regulations of the act would "subject the alien enemy to possible internment for the duration," the FBI announced.

Flynn announced he had scheduled hearings for 21 of the aliens today.

Second prize of a $25 war bond was presented to Olivia Miller. Grand and weekly prizes totaling $250 were awarded for the greatest individual sales of stamps and bonds during July. Hahn's employes also were reported to be 100 per cent in the 10 per cent salary deduction plan.

Charlottesville Motors, Inc., Charlottesville, Va., may not obtain further supplies of new, retreated or recapped tires or new tubes for one year under an order issued yesterday by the Office of Price Administration.

Split in Tammany Perils Mead's Hold

Two District Chiefs Swing to Bennett For Governor as Crucial Convention Nears

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 12.—A rift in the Tammany Hall delegation, whose top leadership is supporting Senator James M. Mead for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, developed today.

Daniel E. Finn, jr., Tammany leader of the First Assembly District, and Herbert L. Bruce, Negro leader of the Twenty-first Assembly District, Harlem, announced they would support Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., Mead's chief rival for the nomination, in the Democratic State convention opening August 18 in Brooklyn.

The Finn and Bruce statements, accompanied by claims from Bennett's supporters that they would have a minimum of 30 votes from the Tammany delegation of 155, marked another day in which claims and counterclaims on convention strength poured forth from both the Mead and Bennett headquarters.

Farley Backs Forecast

State Chairman James A. Farley, who is guiding the Bennett campaign, repeated a previous assertion that "in my humble judgment Senator Mead's name will never be presented to the convention" and again described claims by Terence J. McManus, Mead manager, as "simply silly."

McManus declined to revise his previous total claims of 575 of the 1014 convention delegates and asserted that he had received complaints from the Brooklyn delegation, claimed by Bennett, saying that some delegates were "resentful of being held to their local leaders' original pledge to support Bennett."

Wide discrepancies appeared in the claims of the Mead and Bennett camps with regard to 11 upstate counties and their respective delegations.

In Monroe County, for instance, McManus claimed 11 votes for Mead and Farley at Bennett headquarters said Mead would get only one.

Voters Reject Two Isolationists

By the Associated Press

Representative Hamilton Fish, Republican opponent of President Roosevelt's foreign policy before Pearl Harbor, and Ferdinand A. Hoyt Democrat friend of the Chief Executive, prepared today to battle it out to see who will sit in the House from their New York District in the next Congress.

Fish easily weathered an opposition drive which was supported by Wendell Willkie, titular leader of the party, but not all who had been called isolationists came through in Tuesday's scattered State primaries. Representative Martin L. Sweeney (Democrat) of Ohio, lost to Michael Feighan, who described Sweeney as the "leader of isolationism" in northern Ohio.

No Certain Trend

In most cases there was nothing to show conclusively that the earlier attitudes of the candidates, relative to aid to Britain, lend-lease, etc., had a decisive influence on the electorate at the primaries.

Others in New York who won renomination in the face of isolationism charges were Representative Vito Marcantonio, an American Party left wing leader; Representatives Edwin A. Hall, Binghamton, and Daniel A. Reed, both Republicans; and Representatives William B. Barry, James A. O'Leary and Martin J. Kennedy, New York City Democrats.

New York voters also elected delegates to party State conventions which will nominate candidates for Governor. National attention is focused by a party struggle for the Democratic nomination which finds President Roosevelt and State Democratic Chairman James A. Farley in opposite camps.

Ability of county leaders to make good on pledges despite offors of rival forces to woo delegate support creates a scrambled picture. Farley, who managed two Roosevelt Presidential campaigns, is supporting Attorney General John J. Bennett. Senator James M. Mead claims Roosevelt endorsement.

May Wins in Nebraska

Fish said after his renomination that prewar issues were sunk at Pearl Harbor "and every fair-minded American knows it and resents attempts to revive them."

(The office of Representative Fred J. Douglas (Republican) of New York yesterday notified The Post that Mr. Douglas had been renominated.—Editor's Note.)

In Nebraska, Foster May, 37-year-old Omaha radio announcer, won the Democratic nomination for the Senate seat held by George W. Norris, independent. It was a seven-man field including Representative Harry B. Coffee, whose opponents called his prewar attitude "obstructionist." Kenneth Wherry, Midwest director of the Republicans, won his party's nomination. Norris has not said he will run again but friends expect him to enter the race as an independent.

In Ohio, all incumbent Congressmen were renominated except Sweeney. They included two Republicans, Representatives Charles H. Elston and John M. Vorys, whose prewar policies, their opponents said, impaired the war effort.

John McSweeney, former House member, was nominated by the Ohio Democrats to oppose Republican Gov. John W. Bricker's third term effort.

Glen Taylor, a radio entertainer of Pocatello, Idaho, led a field of five for the Democratic senatorial nomination, and his nearest opponent acknowledged defeat. Senator John Thomas, Republican, won renomination in a walkaway. Representative Compton I. White, Democrat, who was a target of similar criticism, apparently was renominated also.

In Arkansas, former Representative John McClellan piled up a big lead over State Attorney General Jacvk Holt for the democratic nomination for Senator, and Holt conceded defeat, his first in 14 years.

Secrecy Shrouds Probe of Midway Story Publication

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP).—Preparations for a grand jury investigation of the publication by three metropolitan newspapers of allegedly "confidential" Navy information went forward today in an atmosphere of official secrecy.

William D. Mitchell, New York lawyer appointed a special assistant to the Attorney General to direct the inquiry, declined to discuss the situation with reporters but the office of United States Attorney J. Albert Woll indicated presentation of evidence before the grand jury would begin tomorrow.

Five naval officers, lieutenant commanders and lieutenants were ushered into the suite loaned by Woll to Mitchell. Their identity was not disclosed.

The story under investigation was published June 7 by the Chicago Tribune, New York Daily News and Washington Times-Herald. The allegedly "confidential information" under scrutiny was the story's statement that the strength of Japanese naval forces in the Battle of Midway was known in advance in American naval circles.

Gen. Drum Declares Story Of Air Markers Was Phony

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding general of the Eastern Defense Command, said today that alleged "air marker" incidents, described in a recent release by the First Air Force at Mitchel Field, N. Y., were without "hostile motive."

"As a result," General Drum added in a formal statement, "the cases were dropped as having no bearing on national defense."

"The responsibility and the reasons for the release of the photographs and the story are now under investigation and appropriate action will be taken in due time."

The Mitchel Field story and photographs had to do with sacks of grain stacked in a field in the form of a figure nine with the tail of the figure reportedly pointing to an aircraft plant, and plowed fields or woodland clearings shaped like arrows pointing to defense plants and air fields. The material was released to newspapers of last Monday morning.

"The inference was drawn that these ground signs were guides to assist enemy airplanes and were the work of enemy agents," General Drum said in the statement. "The three cases included in the story released were recorded in March and June of this year.

"Following normal intelligence procedure, investigations were made with the conclusions that no hostile motive could be attached to any one of the incidents in question."

General Drum's announcement came a day after the War Department in Washington said that the story "may be untrue" and declared that General Drum was conducting an investigation.

In Trenton, N. J., L. G. McNamara, superintendent of the game management of the State Fish and Game Commisson, had declared that an arrow in the soil, suspected of "pointing to an Eastern air base," was a bird-feeding patch near Haleyville in Cumberland County and the shape was "purely a coincidence."

McNamara added that the Army contacted the commission about the feeding patch three months ago and at the time asked military officials to make an air survey of the State to see if there were other suspected markings.

Dearborn Denies Charge He Conspired To Effect U. S.-Nazi Rubber Patent Pool

By the Associated Press

Richard J. Dearborn, who came to the Government from the Texas Co. as technical consultant in the synthetic rubber program, denied flatly today a charge that he had conspired to keep the rubber production in the hands of a "German-American" patent pool.

Dearborn, consultant of the Rubber Reserve Co., a Federal agency, appeared at his own request before the Senate Patents Committee to defend himself against accusations made last week by C. R. Starnes, independent oil operator of Texas.

Starnes had testified that Dearborn, with Frank A. Howard, of the Standard Oil Development Co., had conspired to "stop the production effort of any group not a member" of the Catalytic Refining Associates, a cartel which included the Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) and the great I. G. Farbenindustrie chemical trust of Germany.

Conspiracy Denied

In reply to this and other charges, Dearborn declared that he never had "any part in any conspiracy . . . in favor of any oil company or companies," was never prejudiced or biased "either against or in favor of any company or group of companies" and had done all in his power to promote the development of the synthetic rubber program.

Under questioning as to what might have prompted Starnes' charges, Dearborn said Starnes, who represented six independent Texas oil operators, was "very disappointed because we could not see our way clear to recommend his proposal" that the group receive contracts to produce butadiene for conversion into synthetic rubber.

Dearborn testified that neither he nor the Texas Co. "ever had any negotiations or contracts regarding synthetic rubber . . . with Germany or other foreign countries, nor with the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, nor any other American or foreign company."

Lucas Asks Action

The Texas Co. had negotiated for patent rights in the C. R. A. group, Dearborn said, but the negotiations were ended by Germany's declaration of war on the United States, when Standard broke off relations with I. G. Farbenindustrie and acquired all its patents. Previously, he said, the Texas Co. had some discussions on patent licenses with I. G., "but never closed any deal."

Dearborn was so sweeping in his denial of Starnes' statements as "entirely false, despicable and unwarranted" that Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, said "When a witness comes before the committee and makes such charges under oath, assassinating a man's character as Starnes did, I believe the committee is entitled to do something about it."

John R. Jacobs, jr., special attorney of the Department of Justice, told the committee that a 1938 agreement between Standard and I. G. retarded the production in the United States of methanol, a wood alcohol used in antifreeze mixtures and capable of use as a motor fuel.

Jacobs, who came in an Army private's uniform from a camp where he is training, said that under the agreement Standard refrained from building a methanol plant, buying its requirements instead from the du Pont Co. at almost half the price charged other purchasers.

U. S. Chamber, A. F. L. Condemn New Tax Bill

By Cecil B. Dickson
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The United States Chamber of Commerce and the American Federation of Labor yesterday called the Treasury-House $6,271,000,000 war tax bill a destroyer of business, a barrier to war production and a failure in providing money and anti-inflation guards needed for the Nation's sake.

The chamber's chief spokesman, Ellsworth C. Alvord, Washington tax expert, urged the Senate Finance Committee to boost the bill to 12 billion dollars by imposing a 10 per cent flat sales levy and a 5 per cent withholding tax on payrolls, dividends and interest.

The A. F. of L.'s top economist, Raymond C. Cranch, joining the C. of C. in criticizing the excess profits provisions of the pending bill as a war-production deterrent, however, broke with C. of C. on the general sales tax idea. He conceded, nevertheless, that a general sales levy that exempted food and clothing was preferable to a flat payroll tax being considered by the committee.

Ruml Plan Indirsed

Alvord surprised the committee by strongly indorsing the pay-as-you-go income-taxcollecting proposal made by Beardsley Ruml, chairman of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and the committee generally likes this revolutionary proposition. The Treasury is studying it. Under it, a taxpayer would estimate his earnings in 1943 and pay on them as they came in, instead of on March 15, 1944, 15 months later.

In order to help avert inflation, Alvord proposed an incentive savings plan for both individuals and corporations. Under it, they would be allowed to buy nonnegotiable, noninterest bonds up to 20 per cent of income, which would be exempted from taxation. The bonds would start bearing 2 per cent interest after the war and could be cashed in five annual installments.

Alvord urged the committee to cut the bill's 45 per cent normal and surtax on corporations to 35 per cent; to revise the 90 per cent excess profits levy to make it apply only to excess profits to prevent profiteering, and to repeal the law requiring renegotiation of war contracts. Renegotiation of contracts is upsetting the Treasury's entire fiscal program, he said.

Cranch said the A. F. of L. opposed all taxes "which would restrict or hinder business activity and the employment of labor." This, he emphasized, included President Roosevelt's proposal to limit incomes to $25,000 a year.

"The Nation would indeed be shortsighted to limit productivity of its business men by such an arbitrary and inflexible rule as the $25,000 ceiling," Cranch said. "The American Federation of Labor opposes a flat ceiling for workers' wages by arbitrary freezing and justice demands that the same principle be applied to industrialists who now earn salaries yielding above $25,000 after payment of taxes."

In taking this stand, the A. F. of L. parts with the C. I. O., whose spokesmen urged the committee last week to adopt the $25,000 income ceiling limit, and declared the pending bill was a "soak the poor" measure.

Roy C. Osgood, vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago; Albert L. Hopkins of Chicago and Paul E. Shorb of Washington argued against the philosophy of the House bill, claiming that it would wreck business and thereby impede the war effort.

Gift Tax Rise Attacked

Osgood called for retention of the existing estate and gift tax laws, saying that if the Treasury's proposals to raise the rates are adopted it would be the seventh time in ten years such rates had been hiked.

Hopkins, pleading for a series of changes to grant relief to hard-pressed corporations not benefiting from the war, left this warning with the committee:

"If this bill, as passed by the House, becomes law, it will go a long way to destroy American industry.

"No business can pay a 90 per cent excess profits rate under the provisions in the bill and survive. The reserves which are necessary to keep a business alive cannot be set aside. The disallowance by the administrative officers of salaries, bonuses and other expenses of various kinds may well cause the exaction of over 100 per cent of income. I talk of practicalities rather than theories."

Alvord impressed the committee in his contention that 25,000,000 workers under the Treasury bill will avoid income taxpayments on about 75 billion dollars of national income.

Figures Mentioned

At the present rate, the national income this year will be about 114 billion dollars, he said, and 27 million of the 52 million earners will pay on about 30 billion dollars, he said.

Most of the income goes to the group under the $5000-a-year bracket. The only way to reach them is through either the sales or withholding tax, Alvord contended, adding that most of the increased buying power which is worrying the Administration anti-inflationists is in the wage earner class.

Rev. Molzahn Denies Dealing With Nazis

By the Associated Press

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 12.—Grim, tired-looking Mr. Kurt K. B. Molzahn, defending himself against a charge that his parsonage in Philadelphia's Franklin Square was used as a "postoffice" for a Nazi spy ring, today emphatically denied he ever had dealings with a quartet of self-confessed espionage conspirators.

The stocky clergyman, who spent the day fighting Government allegations, among them that he was a member of the Nazi Party, vigorously disclaimed he knew, corresponded with or had anything to do with Anastase Vonsiatsky, Dr. Otto Willumeit and Dr. Wolfgang Ebell.

And, asserted the Rev. Molzahn, as for Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze of Philadelphia, former national leader of the German-American bund, "I only heard of him," but he "was never in my home," and "I never had any dealings or communications with him."

Vonsiatsky, former head of the all-Russian Fascist Party, Dr. Willumeit of Chicago, Midwestern leader of the now defunct bund; Dr. Ebell, El Paso, Tex., physician, and Kunze have pleaded guilty to charges of conspiring to furnish the Axis with American military secrets.

Except Vonsiatsky, sentenced to five years in Federal prison, the other three are awaiting their punishment pending the completion of the three-week old pastor's trial.

Earlier today, Federal Judge J. Joseph Smith granted the defense permission to place Kunze, Dr. Willumeit and Dr. Ebell on the stand.

Shortly afterward the pastor, denying he ever wore a Nazi emblem, asserted he pointedly displayed the American flag in his buttonhole while in Germany in 1937 because he didn't "want to be molested by the Nazis by being forced to raise my hand."

Dead Flies Come High at Army Air Base

Williams Field, Ariz., Aug. 12 (AP). The market price of house flies (dead) at this Army air base is 5 cents per dozen.

The medical detachment, hoping to eliminate disease-carrying insects, got out an order that no member of the unit may leave the post without handing in one dead fly for each hour of absence. Thus, a 12-hour pass requires a dozen flies.

Sergt. John Shaughnessy had only two flies. Then he discovered the "black market," with one shrewd member of the medical outfit quoting the price at 5 cents a dozen.

The sergeant got his pass.

Got the need?

We've got the cars!

Rationing Rules were not Meant to Prevent Replacement of Cars which are Really Needed. It Sometimes Helps More to Replace that Old Car than to Try to Keep it Running.

CONSIDER the reasons for present rules and regulations governing the purchase of new cars.

They were not meant to handicap owners whose cars fill necessary purposes. Nor to keep cars on the road beyond the point of safety or efficient operation. Nor to stop the normal process whereby cars pass from owner to owner and thence out of service to become much-needed scrap metal.

They were simply meant to see that cars now built and ready for sale got into the hands of those who needed them—as their needs demanded.

If your car serves a really necessary purpose, Buick dealers are prepared to make immediate delivery on brand-new, gas-thrifty, dependable new models built for the purpose of seeing you through the duration.

With such a car, you travel safely, make best use of gasoline and oil, start fresh with brand-new tires on wheels designed to get maximum life from them. For dependable performance of necessary jobs, such a car is frequently far more of an asset to the country than one which has passed its prime.

Why not drop in on your Buick dealer and talk over all details of the whole situation?

Are you included in this list?

ARE YOU directly or indirectly engaged in the production of war materials or the prosecution of the war?

ARE YOU a physician, surgeon, nurse, veterinarian, clergyman or farmer?

DO YOU use your car in public service, such as fire or police, public health, highway maintenance work or the like?

ARE YOU owner of a taxicab or other vital means of public transportation?

ARE YOU a newspaper wholesaler, or a salesman in essential fields connected with war work?

THESE ARE the broad groups who are eligible under present rationing rules to buy new automobiles. There are other details of eligibility, of course, but if you are included in the above, it will pay you to see your Buick dealer now and get full information. Get the facts before you assume either that you can't or shouldn't buy a new car now!

If you're eligible to buy—
Better Buy Buick!

Using Your Head

It does not matter now to Miss Elizabeth M. Boland whether she was wrong in attempting to cross Pennsylvania Avenue where there was no crosswalk or whether the operator of a streetcar on the Avenue was wrong in not seeing her in time to avoid hitting her. Because Miss Boland suffered fatal injuries in Post Square under circumstances as tragic as they were unnecessary. In one sense, she was the victim of a state of mind that is conducive to mounting slaughter on the streets of Washington. For this, pedestrians and operators of vehicles alike bear a common responsibility. In spite of a toll of traffic accidents that can be described only as monstrous, many pedestrians blithely disregard oncoming traffic. Moreover, operators of vehicles, automobilists as well as streetcar and bus drivers, frequently act as if they have divine sanction to proceed regardless of persons in their way.

It is a vicious circle, and it cannot be broken without far greater exercise of fundamental common sense and alertness. New legislation against jaywalkers, as has been proposed, might help check the accident rate, particularly in downtown areas. But there is no sense in devising jaywalking legislation to cover the whole District because, as many have pointed out, it would be unenforceable in residential districts, where traffic is frequently nonexistent. If it were possible to frame a law requiring everybody to use their God-given intelligence in traffic, accidents would be cut to a minimum. But you can't legislate traffic intelligence for the simple reason that some people don't seem to have it and don't seem interested in acquiring it.

In The Caucasus

Although the Germans have overrun Maikop and have advanced along the Rostov-Baku railroad to a point only 200 miles from the oil fields of Grozny, Russia's principal oil fields are still well out of Hitler's reach. Between the present forward positions of the Nazis and those oil fields there stands the formidable barrier of the Caucasus Mountains, the highest in Europe.

Mountains can be crossed, as Hannibal proved in the Alps many centuries ago. Even the Caucasus can be crossed, particularly if the invaders should succeed in capturing the great military road leading down to Tiflis. It is doubtful, however, if Hitler will try to imitate Hannibal's tactics. He is far more likely to employ with regard to the Caucasus the same strategy he applied so successfully in the case of the Maginot Line. In other words, he may eschew a frontal assault in favor of a flanking move. Indeed, the present activities of the German army in the northwest Caucasus support that thesis.

When Sevastopol was captured the Russian Red Sea fleet lost its principal base. It has been forced to operate exclusively from bases at the eastern end of the Black Sea, in particular from Novorossisk and Tuapse. And it is precisely these points which are now under attack from German columns operating out of Krasnodor, Armavir and Maikop. Should Novorossisk and Tuapse fall the Russian Black Sea fleet would be orphaned, and the Black Sea would become, for all intents and purposes, a Nazi lake.

The danger of an attack on German columns moving southeast from Tuapse along the Black Sea coast to Batum would thus be eliminated. At the same time the Nazis would be in a position to resort to amphibious tactics to establish positions back of the Russian forces opposing such a southward drive or even go around the Caucasus altogether by landing troops in northeast Turkey and striking down toward Iran.

The tragic nature of Russia's plight in the Battle of the Caucasus was clearly indicated in the note struck by Pravda. "Great are the spaces of our country," said that Moscow newspaper, "but we have no place to retreat." This is literally true of the Russian forces trapped in the region west and south of Krasnodor and also of the forces that have been giving way to the east in the region along the Rostov-Baku railway. A catastrophe of major dimensions appears to be in the making in the vicinity of the Caucasus Mountains.

Up They Go

OPA price ceilings are giving way under the pressure of mounting replacement costs. The recent announcement of a new price formula raising wholesale and retail prices for canned fruits and berries between 15 and 25 per cent is a mere foretaste of what is to come. By mid-September the OPA expects to have ready a new pricing method applicable to several hundred food items. The announcement had to be made at once in order to keep goods moving. For the food industry reports that many distributors have simply stopped contracting for delivery of higher-priced vegetables of the current pack and other processed items that could not be sold at a profit under existing ceiling prices. Obviously the wholesalers and retailers who are "squeezed" the hardest by the combination of March price ceilings and mounting replacement costs are those who have been selling at low prices on narrow profits margins. If not given relief, they are the ones who will withdraw, leaving the field to the distributors whose March ceiling prices were higher than average.

The nature of the contemplated relief is conjectural, but it is believed that there will be no subsidies and no general puncturing of price ceilings. However, relief is bound to take the form of higher prices of many articles to the consumer. These upward price adjustments are the inevitable result of a faulty price control system which leaves wages and agricultural products free to rise, while the OPA is trying to hold down prices of processed and manufactured goods. The task is impossible, of course, and the OPA has been forced to bow to the inevitable.

Had funds for the purpose been available, sellers might have been subsidized to keep them in business, as an alternative to raising price ceilings. But, as we have stated frequently, barring a few special cases, subsidization is a dangerous expedient. It makes industry dependent upon the Government, and is likely to result in wasteful use of funds to keep inefficient concerns going at public expense. Unless the price control system is extended to cover wages and all raw material costs, the public might as well resign itself to a progressive raising of price ceilings. The most the OPA can hope to do is to keep such advances from becoming excessive in relation to rising production costs.

Those Headlines Again

As long ago as last January we protested on this page against what seemed a tendency among American news editors and copyreaders to make mere local successes seem like important victories because of the disproportionate emphasis given to them in the headlines.

Part of this focal distortion was merely technical, arising out of the limitations which very large type imposes on vocabulary and syntax (even today we read how Nazis Hurl New Tank Masses at Russ and how Reds Hurl Fresh Reserves to Stem Tide). Part of it was due to a perfectly understandable admiration of the heroism of our badly outnumbered forces. But part of it was due to the fact that the official news itself was concerned almost entirely with local actions.

Since then the protest against too cheerful headlines has been echoed in various quarters. An editorial on this subject from a recent issue of the Infantry Journal was lately reprinted in The Post. There is another article on the subject by a military historian, T. H. Thomas, in the current number of the Atlantic Monthly. Not long ago Mr. Justice Douglas warned a meeting of newspaper publishers against any more of these "rosy-hued headlines."

This last was just a bit too much for Mr. Arthur Krock. Some days ago in the New York Times Mr. Krock retorted with a bitter tu quoque to these critics of the newspapers. Mr. Krock says, in effect, that if the newspapers have given too much prominence to cheerful news it is because the authorities have suppressed the bad news. The press, for example, he writes, was not permitted to explain why it was impossible to relieve MacArthur on Bataan. Mr. Krock, who knew but could not print the reasons, says it was because of the damage inflicted at Pearl Harbor, the extent of which the Navy refused and still refuses to reveal.

However, Mr. Thomas has a rather different story. He says that the explanation of how the Japs were able to establish their blockade was contained in a dispatch sent from Manila on December 28. It was not because of what happened at Pearl Harbor but because of what happened on Luzon. The American Air Force there was virtually wiped out in the first surprise attack. "The effect . . . was to wreck our whole plan of strategic defense in eastern waters . . ."

To all these disputants we should like to suggest the following considerations:

1. That since the earlier months of our participation in the war news editors have been showing a surer understanding of the general strategic patterns, and that this is being reflected in their typographical treatment of the various bulletins and articles they receive from their correspondents and press associations.

2. That if there is still some tendency to give too much prominence to minor episodes, this is partly because the communiques which provide most of the factual news are themselves largely episodic and that they are seldom supplemented or clarified in any official statements.

This brings us to Justice Douglas' observation that "the wartime job of the press is not only to report victories but to analyze them constructively and courageously." This, we assume, applies equally to defeats. But when such analysts as the experienced Mr. Thomas and the well-informed Mr. Krock cannot agree on the reason for our defeat in the south Pacific, and when, as recently, we find an analyst and an Allied Prime Minister in disagreement over what seems primarily a question of fact, when we have military and political leaders making contradictory appraisals and analyses—an occasional confusion of the important and unimportant is almost inescapable.

Longer Hours

That we are only "ankle deep" in war is shown by the conclusions of WPA Commissioner Philip B. Fleming. He says that over one-sixth of all persons employed in June worked less than 40 hours. This is certainly an indication that the labor force of the country is far from being as fully employed as the present wartime emergency requires; though, as the commissioner points out, the lower averages include many persons on part-time work who have other duties to do. Of more significance is the fact that average working time per week for nonagricultural workers increased only eight-tenths of an hour during the year ended in June. That is a very poor showing for a country that is suffering from a shortage of labor in various war industries.

But here again it is dangerous to generalize, since actual working hours for different industries vary widely from the average. In May, for instance, the date of the Department of Labor's latest available returns, the time worked in the machine tool industry averaged 54.1 hours weekly—an increase during the year of 4.1 per cent. In shipbuilding the weekly hours worked averaged 48.8—an increase of 10.5 per cent during the year. But the average working time for most industries was well below—in some instances far below—the 48-hour average which Government agencies now consider to be the best working schedule for sustained efficiency.

While strikes have shown a marked decline since the outbreak of war, they have been increasing in number of late and have resulted in the loss of a good many man-hours of work. Added to that are reported increases in slowdowns that have a seriously retarding effect upon production. Complaints are also being heard about excessive loss of time due to alleged illness and unexplained absences (malingering). That may be due in part to the strain of speed-ups and unaccustomed work. On the other hand, some workers are easily demoralized by higher pay. To keep such irresponsible individuals on the job is a difficult matter, especially at a time when the usual disciplinary threat of firing has little power to persuade.

Man In The Middle

It is good news for the country and for the Navy that Capt. Leland P. Lovette has been named Admiral Hepburn's successor as director of the Navy's Bureau of Public Relations. The job is, by common admission, one of the most important as well as one of the toughest in the service. For the director of Navy public relations is the man in the middle who, in the national interest, must serve two masters—the Navy and the public—and must strive to do so with maximum profit to both. Nobody has ever succeeded in doing this, and in wartime, especially, it is well-nigh impossible, regardless of the abilities of the individual. But if anybody can discharge the duties of director with intelligence and dispatch, Captain Lovette can.

Several years before the war he was the officer in charge of Navy public relations here, and, since his return from sea duty, shortly after Pearl Harbor, he has been Admiral Hepburn's assistant. Author of the standard guide, Naval Customs, Traditions and Usage, and frequent contributor to magazines, Captain Lovette is well and favorably known in and out of the service. The job he is taking on promises to grow more rather than less difficult. It goes without saying, therefore, that if he is to make the most of his broad experience and training in public relations, he will need all the cooperation, official and unofficial, that may reasonably be expected.

WHEN THE GRASS WAS TALL

Looking back over the years, turning
The memories over and over again
Like one leafing the pages of a book,
We can read the chapters of a friendliness
That grew out of the sun-lined days
When we found that the fields had given
To each of us meadowlark songs in the dew
Of morning, songs of the vesper sparrow
In the quiet of evening when the shadows
Crept slowly across the hills. We had heard,
And then we went together when the grass
Was tall and shaded pools spilled water
Enough to let the streams gurgle musically.
There, in the warm days, we listened
To trees whispering in the wind,
Making us glad of summer, and of hills.

Laxity Demoralizes

Most grievances today may seem comparatively small when contrasted with the general world outlook. These grievances, however, can and do to a large extent affect this outlook.

The sum total of human misery brought about by war itself is having a gradual crushing effect upon the minds and spirits of men. Why, then, must we tolerate an outrageous element of individual injustice entering the picture?

In a branch of the Government service extremely vital to our war effort I have witnessed an existing condition of inefficiency and laxity which has given rise to unquestionable dissatisfaction. Can we expect men to offer their best services when a few of their fellow workers engaged in despicable loafing are rewarded for their efforts of idleness with pay and grade increases while many who are efficient, hard workers find themselves, for some reason or other, left where they are or put at the bottom of the efficiency list? To ask why is worse than useless, for one might just as well reach for the moon as to try and get a comprehensive logical answer from those who "pass the buck."

We may be sure that our boys are not bleeding and dying today for the emergence of a system where negligence and shiftlessness will be rewarded on the same basis or even in preference to skill and ambition.

On our side we are fighting for individual freedom and justice. We are fighting for a perpetuation of private enterprise, for the right of men to freely leave a job for another if they feel their best talents are being restricted. We are fighting for the abolition of existing inequality and not for a genesis of new abuses.

It is evidence that the press can be effective in bringing to light conditions which should not exist and can have the courage to act.

Statues In Washington

Now that the metal demands of our armed forces are suggesting that we melt up many statues throughout the country, it seems a good time to make a survey of the whole statue situation in Washington. Many of these "objects of art" are pretty terrible, and it is hard to find any reason for their continuing to offend the eye.

But there are other statues in our parks and streets that, as objects of art, are perhaps not objectionable but nevertheless call for question. Almost everywhere we are confronted with an equestrian statue of a Civil War general. Are we so destitute of great men that we have to draw almost entirely on the four years of that war for our heroes? Are we so destitute of artistic initiative that we can conceive of only a general on horseback? These men represented in bronze were gallant, patriotic American soldiers, but we have had and will have thousands of others. These statues, it seems to me, should be taken down and converted into tanks and aircraft (these patriotic men if living would applaud the idea), and after this war the Federal Government might erect appropriate statues of them in their local communities.

After the war what should replace these statues in our parks and circles? Washington is becoming the leading Capital of the world as well as one of its most beautiful cities. Why not make it a world Hall of Fame, honoring those men throughout the ages and nations who have contributed most to the welfare of mankind? Our city would honor itself in a way that no other city has ever done. The men and women thus marked for distinction by the American people should include such as Aristotle, Newton, Shakespeare, Emerson, Franklin, Beethoven, Michelangelo, Edison, Simon Bolivar, Galileo, Kepler, Longfellow, Mozart, Joan of Arc, Tschaikovsky, Dante, Gen. Grant, Woodrow Wilson, Mendelssohn, Edmund Burke, Faraday and Alexander Hamilton.

Post Editorials On India

It would seem that The Post's editor would ration clear thinking for the duration along with many other "nonessentials." Your editorials on the Indian question are callous misinterpretations of fact if not sheer fabrication. To state that India has not given "full and active support to Great Britain's" war effort is to make a liar (not hard) out of English statesmen.

May I recommend to you British reports, prior to the freedom-for-India crisis, in which the war effort of India was highly praised, not only for an amazing production record but for India's "voluntary" fighting units as well. The "voluntary" is Britain's own phraseology.

In view of the fact that England and all the United Nations are fighting for the seven freedoms it does seem rather ridiculous that these may not be first bestowed at home before conferring the benevolent seven on other peoples even less familiar with the intricate machinery of democracy than India. The statement that "chaos and confusion" would result from India's freedom is nonsense. India is as capable of governing herself as England and she has proven this in as many instances as England would allow, which, granted, were all too few. However, if England would have one give credence to her sincerity in the cause of freedom and equality for all subject peoples let her begin with India. And if England would genuinely desire to avoid "chaos and confusion" let her recognize a free India—a free India could be no more of a maelstrom and a hindrance in the United Nations' war effort than India in turmoil seeking release from imperial subjugation.

NANCY STABER.

Washington, Aug. 8.

The Post's editorial, "Gandhi's Latest," in Tuesday's paper, should be read and pondered by every thoughtful American. Its reasoning is beyond question. Gandhi, in his manifesto to the so-called All-India Congress, advocates negotiations with Japan as the first step to be taken by an independent India. Previously, the little Mahatma and congress broadcast widely that a free India would not interfere with the British army in its conduct of the war with Japan. In other words the British would be graciously allowed to keep Japan off India's neck. The program of Gandhi and congress follows a reported conference at Rangoon between representative Hindus and Japanese agents and the whole movement, doubtless, is being engineered from Tokyo.

Britain is a country that has never shirked her duty to humanity. She has done more for civilization and democracy than every other country on the face of the globe combined. Nine-tenths of the worth-while things in America we owe to Britain. What knowledge of government and democracy the Indians possess they got from British administration. Why then should not Britain be depended upon to keep the promises of Sir Stafford Cripps regarding Indian independence after the war is over?

In the government for India that may be formed after the war, it can be counted as a certainty that Britain will make sure that the rights of Moslem and other minorities are fully guaranteed, otherwise chaos would result.

The average upper-class Hindu, clamoring for "independence now," has absolutely no regard for the welfare of the masses of India. On the contrary, only contempt. He wants independence for the offices, emoluments and honors that might accrue to himself, and there would be plenty created to satisfy that want.

The fact is that less than 500 British are in the entire civil government of India, Indians having replaced Britons wherever practicable. That does not smack of "British imperialism" in a country of 350 million people. Why, there are five times that number of Federal officials and employes in our own City of Richmond alone.

ALBERT S. BROWN.

Round Hill, Va., Aug. 6

The Party Line

The world has progressed, so we, the patriots, no longer have a voice—not even in the press. We are being silenced by the new patriot who parks his brain and parrots the party line.

Although it is common knowledge that the world chaos is due to the debased intelligence of the mass, and Ortega y Gasset in his "Revolt of the Masses" nearly a decade ago, predicted the return of Europe to barbarism within three decades, yet the modern day uplifter continues to prattle of the "four freedoms," "world democracy" and the "new order," as if with all of the slaughter the world had suddenly and miraculously experienced its rebirth.

The modern patriot accepts without question the goats upon whom are loaded the responsibility for our domestic failures and war defeats. However dumb he may be, he can be made to understand that in order to retain the party in power and thereby not kill the goose that lays the golden egg, the blame for our tragic failures and the wrecking of America must never be borne by the President and the reforming clique behind him who with a world war on their hands, are more interested in promoting world revolution than in saving the republic. So the modern day patriot learns to parrot the party line both in the press and on the radio and to blame the Congress and isolationists who are portrayed as little short of imbeciles.

Layman On Art

For the past week I have been trying to find someone who can see anything artistic or even sensible in the statue of Christ by George Kratina which seems to be seriously considered as a winner by so-called art judges. I should think all Christians through the country would rise in revolt against a thing that looks like a cross between a pig and a small being used as a representation of Christ. And our art critics who can try to foist such stuff on a long suffering public belong in Lilliput.

The Post Impressionist

Fall Of Carthage

There is nothing in the appearance of Mr. Carthage, as he steps off the front perch of his little suburban house promptly every morning at 7:30 to start off for work, that would mark him out for your special attention. He looks much like any man who has worked 25 years for the Government—a little bent, a little gray, a little nondescript. A very observant watcher might wonder why Mr. Carthage always makes that oddly defiant little gesture of squaring his shoulders before he leaves the protection of his porch. But observant watchers are not given to wasting their time on men like Mr. Carthage. His type is too respectable to be interesting.

And yet this same Mr. Carthage, who is too respectable to be interesting, is the victim of blackmail. "Ah," you will say, "a pretender, a hypocrite. Probably getting what he deserves," and you will dismiss him contemptuously. But your attitude would not be fair to Mr. Carthage. For he is not paying the price of his secret sins (for Mr. Carthage has no secret sins), but for his kindness of heart.

It all began quite innocently, as such things do when Mr. Carthage and his wife several years ago, after patient effort on their part, accumulated the necessary sum to make a down payment on their long-desired home in one of Washington's suburbs.

Mr. Carthage took to the new life eagerly. The trees and flowers and birds that were an integral part of this environment pleased him, and he cast a fond eye on the antics of the squirrels that frisked and scampered along his path as he walked to the bus in the morning.

"Cute little fellows," he would say to himself as he watched them appreciatively, and discovering some peanuts during the course of a pantry raid one night it occurred to him that it would be a good idea to put some in his pocket to feed to the squirrels the next morning.

Accordingly, the next day, Mr. Carthage acted on his inspiration and found the squirrels to be eager recipients of his largesse. Mr. Carthage reached his office feeling beneficient and pleased with the world.

So long as the supply of peanuts lasted Mr. Carthage continued to feed the squirrels. But one morning there were no peanuts left. Outside of a mild regret he gave no thought to the matter and set off briskly as usual. But Mr. Carthage had overlooked one important factor. He had forgotten to inform the squirrels.

Unaware that their benefactor had ceased to fulfill that role, they surrounded him. Mr. Carthage tried to pretend a bland indifference of their desires, but the squirrels were not to be so lightly put off. When no peanuts appeared they leaped on Mr. Carthage's shoulders, ran up and down his arms, and burrowed in his pockets.

Now it may be that the squirrels were only searching and had no thought of any evil intent upon the person of Mr. Carthage. But it did not appear so to the jaundiced view of their victim. Definitely, it seemed to him that he was being attacked. He remembered with horror that the habitual diet of squirrels necessitated very sharp teeth indeed and vague memories picked at his mind of newspaper accounts he had read where people had mysteriously sickened and died as the result of squirrel bites.

Mr. Carthage was no hero. Mr. Carthage turned and fled back to the safety of his house. Mr. Carthage took leave that day, in fact, could not be persuaded outside the front door until Mrs. Carthage had secured his safety by ordering some more peanuts from the grocery.

Now Mr. Carthage never sets out in the morning without making sure that his pockets contain their requisite supply of nuts. He buys them himself in 2-pound lots as it doesn't seem to him that Mrs. Carthage fully realizes their importance.

Watching him in the morning surrounded by the squirrels, Mr. Carthage appears rather like a suburban St. Francis in a blue serge suit. But if you came close enough to him to read the expression in his eyes as he regards his animal companions, you might be surprised. Mr. Carthage is not a man given to strong emotions. But the expression in his eyes is definitely bilefu.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

India

INDIA IS a subject which is as remote from the political experience of all of us in America as Einstein's mathematics are from ordinary arithmetic. For no matter how many times we are told that "India" is no more a nation than "Europe" is a nation, it is not long before most of us fall back into talking as if the Hindus of the Congress Party are India, and that Gandhi is the George Washington of the Indian nation demanding independence from King George III.

LIPPMANN

Thus there are 80 or 90 million Moslems in India, as many as there are Germans in Europe. The Moslems and the Hindus are at least as much opposed to each other as were Protestants and Catholics during the religious struggles of the Seventeenth Century. There are also the "Depressed Classes," some 60 million—more than there are Italians in Europe—who are excluded from the caste-bound society of the Hindus. There are also ancient kingdoms in India, and there are a number of relatively small energetic nations such as the Sikhs.

THE PROBLEM of India is how the separate peoples of India can be both independent and united. This is a problem which the separate peoples of Europe have never been able to solve though they are politically more experienced than the Indians. No one has ever found a way to give the peoples of Europe self-determination and independence and at the same time to unite them in one European commonwealth. Any American who thinks he knows how to solve the Indian problem ought to find the solution of the European problem child's play. For what has never been done in Europe, both the Hindus and the British have been trying to do in India. They have been trying to keep all of India under one government and yet to assure the Hindus, the Moslems, the Depressed Classes, and the Indian Kingdoms the privileges of independence.

How difficult, and perhaps impossible, it is to achieve this dual result may be judged from what happened in the provinces of India which between 1937 and 1939 had complete self-government under the rule of the Congress Party. Every year the Moslems who were ruled by the Hindus solemnly observe the end of this experiment by celebrating "Deliverance Day." Their leader, Mr. Jinnah, who is to the Moslems what Mahatma Gandhi is to the Hindus, has ever since demanded separate Moslem states—called Pakistan—which would be as independent of the Hindu states—called Hindustan—as France from Germany.

SO WELL do the Congress Hindus understand how well-nigh impossible it is for India to be both unified and independent, that when the British used to promise them independence as soon as Indians could unite, they charged the British with insincerity. They said that since the British were offering independence under the one condition—namely unity—which could never be fulfilled, the British never meant to get out of India.

It was not until the Cripps mission that the British Government faced this dilemma and said that India could be independent even if that meant the end of the unity of India. Under the Cripps proposal, the Moslem regions do not have to become part of an India ruled by the Hindu majority.

IT IS CLEAR, so it seems to me, that the real cause of the present Hindu revolt is not the disbelief that the British will leave India but the realization that they are certainly going to leave India. Ever since 1935, when the British began their withdrawal from India, the struggle between Hindus and Moslems has become sharper. It was bound to become sharper the nearer the Indians got to independence. For once it was certain that Britain was going, and going fairly soon, a terrific struggle was bound to ensue as to whether the Congress Party Hindus were to rule all of India. The stakes are tremendous. The stakes are an empire. And Gandhi's demand that his party be granted immediately the control of the war-time government of all of India is the one way in which a Hindu empire might be established and consolidated.

But to yield to the Congress Hindus' demands would be to place in their hands for the domination of the whole of India all the dictatorial war powers plus the military support of the United Nations. This would call for the abandonment, and in effect, the betrayal of the Moslems in order to obtain the collaboration of the Hindu party. This would have been a mighty poor bargain, considering the fact that the Congress Party is led by men who have no stomach for resisting a Japanese invasion and are prepared to negotiate a separate peace.

HOW, we may ask, would the Japanese deal with the Indian problem if they conquer India? We know fairly well from what they have done in China. They would partition India and set up puppet governments under their own strict control. They would rule by dividing India: then there would no longer be any such thing as the unity of India nor any such thing as the independence of its separate parts. They would use Congress Hindus as their puppets in one province, Moslem puppets in another, perhaps Indian princes elsewhere.

No doubt Gandhi and his political subordinates realize this. But insofar as the Congress Hindus think that Japan would use them as puppets to rule most of India, a quick surrender to a victorious Japan would seem to be the quickest and cheapest way for them to obtain power. There were Frenchmen, some of them highly venerated by the French nation, who made a very similar calculation in 1940. Gandhi could probably obtain from the Japanese something very much like a Vichy government—just about as free and covering just about as much of India.

MY OWN VIEW is that Americans cannot resolve the Indian crisis by exhortations addressed to the British or to the Indians. The Indian problem—how to combine unity with independence—is insoluble in the next few critical weeks. What Europe has not achieved in seven centuries will not be achieved in India by the end of this summer.

The problem which may be soluble this summer is the defense of India. The answer to that may be given in part by measures taken inside of India. But even more decisively the fate of India may be determined by what is happening in the Solomon Islands and the Aleutians, and what may come of all that.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Little Red Gandhi

Once upon a time there was a little boy named Mohandas Gandhi. He reminded people of Little Red Riding Hood in a way. One day he packed a lunch and set off to visit grandma, who lived in a cottage away out in the woods. It was a queer lunch consisting of raw vegetables and nuts garnished with queer notions. But Mohandas liked it, so he thought grandma would.

* * * *

When he neared the cottage a great fire raged all around it and it was plain to see that there was the very devil to pay, but Gandhi didn't bother about that. As he was about to knock on the door he suddenly noticed that there wasn't any door. It had been torn away. But that didn't cramp his style either.

* * * *

"Grandma must be in trouble," he mused, but he brushed that suspicion away at once, and climbed across the charred beams into the bedroom.

Then he saw the bed upside down with a figure in it that was plainly not grandma to anybody but Mohandas. He wore thick glasses, you know.

The figure in bed was clearly a wolf that had put on grandma's nightcap and nightgown.

"Gr-r-r-r rr!" it snarled.

"You don't sound like grandma," said Gandhi, "but I understand. Your voice is changing, that's all."

The wolf licked his chops by way of an answer.

* * * *

"You don't look like grandma," said Gandhi.

"Don't quibble," said the wolf. "And, say, what big ears you have!"

"The better to hear you with!" said the wolf.

"And what big eyes you have!" said Gandhi.

"The better to see you with!" said the wolf.

* * * *

"What a big nose you have!" exclaimed Mohandas.

"You should talk!" said the wolf.

"What big teeth you have!" said Mohandas.

"The better to eat you with!" roared the wolf, starting to get out of bed.

"Hold on!" cried Gandhi, "I'm not ready to be eaten yet."

"Why not?" demanded the wolf, "I haven't got my freedom."

"What of it?" snapped the wolf.

"Oh!" replied Gandhi, "I must have my freedom first. I could never consider being eaten until I have it."

"I don't mind," argued the wolf, "I will eat you with or without it."

"Hush! I will be much better eating with it," insisted Mohandas.

"Bunk!" growled the wolf, looking skeptical.

* * * *

At this moment fresh flames swept the cottage, the timbers began falling in. Gandhi and the wolf were running around the ruins at top speed.

"Wait a bit," insisted Mohandas. "Let's get this thing straight. Am I chasing you or are you chasing me?"

"This is pretty late in life for a man like you to start getting things straight," said the wolf, who had now ripped off grandma's nightgown and was wearing a Japanese uniform.

* * * *

The smoke, heat and general chaos were now terrific.

"Something's quite wrong here," said Mohandas.

"Listen," said the wolf, now a little disgusted, "I ain't your grandma. And I ain't going to eat you."

Mohandas looked the wolf straight in the eyes.

"Oh, yes you are my grandma," he declared, "and what's more you ARE going to eat me. Open wide!"

* * * *

The wolf opened his jaws wide and Mohandas crawled in.

"Freedom is freedom," he announced as he disappeared down the slant-eyed wolf's gullet.

Only Ankle Deep

I'm up to my neck in coupons—
In taxes I'm up to my chin;
The feeling I'm getting in deeper
Assails me agin and agin.

I'm up to my eyebrows in worries—
In "don't lists" I'm up to my ears;
An undertow seems to have caught me
But that isn't so, it appears.

I'm up to my shoulders in edicts—
My arms from the swimming are sore;
Yet Washington says, "Don't be silly—
You ain't ankle deep in this war!"

Walter Donovan is reported to have given Eastern racing something that is flabbergasting the cash customers—courtesy, consideration and treatment as equals. Visitors at the Jersey track come back pop-eyed with incredible tales of politeness. It is possible, they say, to spend a whole afternoon at the races and not be browbeaten by a $2 mutuels window clerk, sneered at by the attendants or given the untouchable treatment by track officials. "You'll never believe it," declared Elmer Twitchell, "a mutuels window man gave me the wrong ticket and when I called his attention to it he just took it back, smiled, and said, 'My mistake. Sorry'."

Los Angeles, like many American cities, is startled by an alarming juvenile crime wave. Of 300 boys rounded up the other day, more than 100 were carrying concealed weapons. We commend this to the attention of Mr. Will Hays, the highly paid movie censor who permits crime pictures like "Gun for Hire" to be shown at children's matinees.

Canadian Communists

By Janet R. Keith

Proposal To Lift Party Ban

A SPECIAL committee of Parliament appointed to investigate the Defense of Canada regulations has recommended to the Canadian government that the ban on the Communist Party be lifted. But Parliament has adjourned without debating the question, and the Minister of Justice has intimated that he will urge the cabinet to continue the ban. Tim Buck, leader of the Communist Party in Canada, is still liable for arrest—if the Royal Canadian Mounted Police can catch him.

Since the outbreak of the war many Communists have been interned under the Defense of Canada regulations, which gave the Minister of Justice power to intern any citizen "with a view to preventing him from acting in any manner prejudicial to the public safety or the safety of the state." It was argued in the early days of the war, and probably with justification, that the Communists were not supporting the war effort.

But there is no doubt that Canadian Communists, like radical elements in other countries, were completely won over to the war when Germany attacked Russia. Many interned men have sought to enlist in the armed forces. The president of the Seamen's Union, released from internment, made a study of shipping problems and proffered solutions which were gratefully acted upon by the Minister of Munitions and Supply.

People Dislike Defense Rules

In May of this year a committee of 15 members of Parliament was set up for the purpose of investigating and reporting upon the Defense of Canada regulations. It soon became apparent from representations made to the committee that the people of Canada are not satisfied with the regulations as they now stand.

An open letter to the parliamentary committee ran for a full page in many newspapers. It was signed by several hundred citizens—editors, professors, ministers, labor officials, businessmen, artists—none of whom had ever belonged to any of the banned organizations.

The petition pointed out that not a single member of the United Nations had followed the Canadian example of outlawing organizations and interning individuals with long anti-Fascist records behind them. It quoted Sir Norman Birkett, noted British justice, as saying, "It is a terrible thing to contemplate that men and women, ordinary citizens of the state, can be taken secretly into concentration camps upon the bare word of some secret agent and left, without trial or investigation, to linger and to die."

The petition urged upon the parliamentary committee a four-point program: The release of all interned labor, anti-Fascist persons prepared to contribute to the prosecution of the war. The cancellation of all outstanding internment orders against such people so that they may work effectively. The removal of the ban against all working-class and labor-progressive organizations opposed to fascism. The energetic prosecution of all pro-Fascist, fifth column saboteurs and their organizations which are still permitted to carry on pro-Hitler and pro-Vichy activity.

Newspapers Charge Politics

The release of Earl Browder in the United States stimulated the demand for the removal of the ban on the Canadian Communists. Newspapers quoted widely Mr. Roosevelt's statement that commuting Browder's sentence would tend to allay any feeling that his unusually long sentence was a penalty imposed on him because of his political views. Even conservative editors asked: "Who can deny, 10 months after Soviet Russia became Canada's partner and ally, that the continued outlawing of Communists in Canada is being maintained for political reasons?"

This month William T. Lawson, a former public school trustee in the City of Toronto, was released from jail. The charge against him was—and apparently still is—that he is a Communist. He was released, not to promote national unity as in Browder's case, but because he was dangerously ill. To Premier Hepburn of Ontario goes the credit for having urged his release. Mr. Hepburn observed in an interview:

"Here is a man whose only crime is something he believes. He is a respected and respectable citizen. He has broken no law, yet he is confined like a dog in the local bastile. It is a shame and a scandal. Think of a six-foot man weighing only 137 pounds and being locked up for his beliefs."

Rally Culminates Agitation

The culmination of agitation against the Defense of Canada regulations was a mass rally of 5,000 people called by the Civil Liberties Association of Toronto. Speakers were Arthur Garfield Hays, American lawyer, Canadian members of Parliament and labor leaders.

The powerful Toronto Daily Star, hitherto a stanch supporter of every phase of government war policy, has gone all out for amendment of the defense regulations. Commenting editorially on the rally it said: "Last night the gathering was not that of partisans or political extremists. The speakers spoke not for communism but for the rights of people in a democracy to have their own beliefs . . . If nothing else, the arrests and internment of Communists or their sympathizers places Canada in an unenviable light, for this is the only country among the Allied Nations which today puts declared anti-Nazis and anti-Fascists behind bars."

When it was known that the parliamentary committee would recommend lifting the ban on the Communist Party and seven other illegal organizations, a full-dress debate in the House of Commons was expected. There was a flurry of excitement when Fisheries Minister Michaud, a French-Canadian from the Maritimes, resigned chairmanship of the committee in protest against the stand being taken. But there was no debate.

Asked to give the government's opinion of the committee report, Mr. St. Laurent, the Minister of Justice, said that "he would be very reluctant to recommend any legislation which could be interpreted as legalizing real communism in Canada." He added that it would be most unfortunate if the impression were to get abroad that Canada had lifted the ban, and intimated that he would recommend a contrary course to the cabinet.

"The cabinet? What about Parliament?" asked a leading Canadian newspaper angrily. "Is a committee of Parliament to be over-ridden by the cabinet on the say-so of Mr. Michaud and Mr. St. Laurent without Parliament itself pronouncing on this important question? . . . Important questions should not be transferred from Parliament to the cabinet in order to escape an 'uncomfortable' discussion in the house, perhaps involving divisions within the parties or a further disturbance of the 'Quebec situation.' Parliament should discuss the recommendation of the committee. The recommendation should be accepted."

A Soviet Ambassador to Canada has just been appointed. The government of India has lifted the ban on the Indian Communist Party, and will permit publication of the party's newspapers. It remains to be seen whether the pressure of these outside circumstances, along with the insistent demands of the Canadian people, will alter the fate of communism in Canada.

Japanese Indo-China

By Selden Menefee

'Co-Prosperity' In Practice

THE FRUITS of collaboration with Japan are clearly shown by the state in which Indo-China finds itself today, after two years of playing ball with the Nipponese.

On July 18 a trade treaty was signed by representatives of the Japanese and the Vichy French in Indo-China. It followed a year of negotiations which showed the reluctance of the colonial officials to come to terms, in spite of their appeasement policy.

Under the terms of the treaty Japan is to get all of Indo-China's surplus rice and raw materials at prices to be determined by Tokyo. In return Indo-China will get Japanese small wares and light manufactured goods—in other words, whatever goods Japan sees fit to give her, at whatever prices Japan chooses to set.

Colony Faces Hunger

Thus Indo-China is now an integral part of the economy of what the Japanese euphemistically term "The Greater East Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere." Not only does the unhappy colony have to pay deference to thousands of Japanese occupation troops; now it must also face the prospect of going hungry in order that imperial Japan may not suffer if the Japanese rice crop is short (and it has been getting shorter each year for the past several years).

Japanese intrigue in Indo-China goes back to 1905, when a leading Annamese nationalist took refuge in Japan and continued his work from there. Annamese students were welcomed in Japan, and those who went back to their home colony became the nucleus of a fifth column. For a time this took the form of Cao-Daism, a Japanese-sponsored nationalist movement with the ostensible aim of uniting Confucianism, Buddhism and Christianity.

Much of Japan's propaganda in Indo-China, as in Thailand and Burma, has emphasized the "spiritual kinship" of Buddhists in southeast Asia with those of Japan. Alleged Japanese tolerance for Catholicism in China and the Philippines has been used to win over the million or so Catholics in Indo-China.

Tokyo has also appealed to the economic motives of the 400,000 Chinese in Indo-China, many of whom are prosperous merchants. They must oppose the Chungking government (verbally, at least) or take the consequences.

In June, 1940, the governor-general of Indo-China was a Free Frenchman of great personal popularity, but Vichy soon replaced him with Jean Decoux. The Vichyite used Saigon radio to try to convince the Fighting French of the south Pacific islands that they should collaborate with Tokyo.

Fighting French Action Continues

Last November, probably under pressure from Japan, Decoux dismissed 150 Annamites because they were "incapable of collaboration." In spite of this, as late as last January the Japanese alleged that Free French activities "are still going on and are showing no signs of abatement."

The Indo-Chinese are extremely poor; nine-tenths of them are peasants, and wages of nonfarm workers have averaged around 20 cents a day (American money) for 10 to 12 hours of work. Japanese military authorities have raised native wages somewhat, in the hope that this will make them prefer Japanese rule to French.

Hope for resistance against Japanese domination does not lie with the 40,000 or so Frenchmen in Indo-China, even though their sympathies may be predominately with the Fighting French. It is the native population which may eventually rebel, when conditions are more auspicious.

Most of the country's 22 million native people are Annamites. They have strong nationalistic sentiments, although their organization and leadership are poor. They may be glad to see Japan reduce the power of the French authorities, whom they cordially dislike. But eventually they will come to realize that Japanese rule offers them even less hope of independence, and then they may determine to set up their own government.

Stabilizing Wages

By Ben W. Gilbert

Five Agencies Mapping Program

The War Labor Board, acting in concert with four other Government agencies, has agreed to stabilize the wages of 20,000 copper, lead and zinc mine workers as the first step in solving a critical man power shortage which threatens to seriously impair the production program for these metals, the Office of War Information announced yesterday.

Wage increases ranging from $1 to $1.50 a day have been demanded by the C. I. O. Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in 37 mines, mills and smelters throughout the country. The union has estimated the present man power shortage at 5000 to 6000, with an additional shortage of 5000 expected next year.

The five agencies involved—WLB, the War Production Board, Office of Price Administration, the War Man Power Commission and the War Department—have been holding conferences recently to work out a unified program to safeguard our production of the three metals against threatened severe loss as a result of continued migration of metal miners to other industries—particularly aircraft and shipbuilding on the West Coast and Army construction projects in the Rocky Mountain area.

Tentative Program

In addition to wage stabilization which is WLB's job, the following program has been tentatively evolved:

1. The War Production Board will receive a request to close down the 300 largest gold mines in the country, in an effort to free anywhere from 2000 to 6000 miners for copper, zinc and lead production work.

2. The Man Power Commission has been asked to evolve an employment policy for the mines to make sure that all released gold miners eventually land in some other mining job, and also to take measures to encourage miners now working to hold their jobs. This involves an effort to provide adequate transportation of workers from the gold to other mines, and making of arrangements to improve housing and morale in these other mines.

3. The War Department has agreed to prevent raids on mine labor by its constructions projects and by war production work wherever possible. At the same time, Selective Service will be asked to consider proposals that miners either be granted a blanket deferment, or that draft quotas in mining districts be reduced, it was learned.

4. The Office of Price Administration would have the job of re-examining its price schedules for these critical metals to see if some adjustments might not have the effect of increasing production. At the same time, OPA would consider the effect of any WLB wage increase on the price structure for the industry.

The interdepartmental committee was sparkplugged as a result of work by both the labor production division of the War Production Board and the Army Service of Supply headed by Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell on the industry's man power problem. Somervell suggested early last month in a confidential memorandum that workers be transferred from other mining ventures including gold, iron, and coal to copper, lead and zinc. The WPB labor division was simultaneously working on production proposals advanced by the C. I. O. union to relieve the labor shortage.

A report by the union which was filed with WPB last month pointed out that although a production drive program is operating effectively at present, "our accomplishments along these lines and our entire production program are now threatened with failure—if the problem of supplying sufficient man power for the metal mines, mills and smelters is not solved."

In addition to present shortages, additional shortages can be expected during the next 18 months, the union said, because of expanded operations.

Wage Comparison Made

On the wage question, the union presented Bureau of Labor Statistics figures to show that metal miners earned an average of $37.28 a week last April, compared with $45.94 in aircraft and $53.30 in shipbuilding.

Another factor complicating the man power picture, the union said, have been early intimations of plans to "freeze" men in jobs, intimations which caused a considerable movement of workers out of the mines to other better paying industries. Other problems include housing, morale, discrimination against both Mexican labor and union members, transportation, and hazardous working conditions, the union report stated.

WLB in acting to stabilize in the metal mines consolidated labor disputes involving the 37 mines into one case and set them down for hearing before a three-man panel starting next Wednesday. It is understood that although the entire industry is not represented in the new consolidated case any wage determination made in the case will set wages for the whole industry. Because of this fact, WLB yesterday offered to add any further disputes involving the industry to the case.

In this case, the "little steel" formula will not apply because the workers in the mines have received at least the 15 per cent wage increase since January, 1941, which is allowed under the board's wage-stabilization plan. Any increase granted will be on the basis of the need for man power stabilization, it was learned. It is understood that WLB plans to allow the Man Power Commission and the labor production division of WPB to present evidence on this question.

Joint U. S.-Brazil War Defense Board For Hemisphere Solidarity Is Created

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

In another step toward Western Hemispheric solidarity, the War Department Tuesday announced creation of a joint Brazil-United States Defense Commission.

The announcement was coincident with the arrival here by plane of Maj. Gen. Leitao de Carvalho of the Brazilian army staff, a 44-year-old career soldier and diplomat who arose from the ranks to serve as a Brazilian delegate to the League of Nations.

General Carvalho was met at the airport by Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney deputy Chief of Staff of the United States Army. Preliminary conferences on "important problems of hemispheric defense," were initiated immediately, the department said.

In a few days additional Brazilian representatives will arrive and formal joint sessions of the new defense commission will get under way, the department added.

Judge Bentley Reports 8.4% Rise In Juvenile Delinquency in District

An 8.4 per cent increase in juvenile delinquency and a 16.4 per cent increase in the number of cases actually to reach the courts here in the last year were cited yesterday by Judge Fay Bentley of the District Juvenile Court, at a National Capital Optimist Club meeting at the Capitol Park Hotel.

In the last two years, Judge Bentley said, the increase has been 28.4 per cent above figures up to 1940, which remained fairly static until that time.

"The reasons for this upward climb are so varied that it is impossible to put a finger on any one cause. Overcrowding, lack of recreational facilities, parental neglect all contribute to the problem.

"Many camps, all fine, constructive means of teaching good sportsmanship and fair play, have been taken over for use in the war effort, so that chances for camping are denied unless other facilities are offered, such as the Police Boys Club and the Boy Scout camps.

"Jobs often are helpful in correcting young delinquents, but what is a therapeutic treatment for one may be bad for another, whose spending power is increased beyond his power to use it.

"In England, abnormal conditions, lack of supervision and a distorted moral outlook have caused such increases in juvenile crime that many experts in that field are being brought back from the war front to deal with this civilian problem."

In the last fiscal year, she pointed out, her department has received 5606 complaints, 3477 of them dealing directly with juveniles and the rest to adult cases, such as nonsupport, parentage of children born out of wedlock and child labor violations.

Follow 15 Rules and Prolong Life of Tires, Ickes Is Told

If Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes observes 15 simple rules, the tires on his Government car will be good for another 27,500 miles, which is just 12,500 more than his own estimate of 15,000 miles.

This was revealed yesterday when Ickes, his chauffeur, and a dozen photographers, reporters and employes got down on bended knees at the Standard Oil Building, 261 Constitution Avenue Northwest, to observe something about a new "tire-stretching" program which Standard has promised will be available to the public August 19.

The secret, said Standard, lies in the amount of tread on the tires and on the spare. After measuring the tread on each up to 1/32 of an inch, you may prolong the life of all five from 10 to 15 per cent, by judicious switching and rotating.

Ickes Makes a Guess

Secretary Ickes peered at his tires and guessed that they had 15,000 miles of service left.

The oil company employes produced a plastic ruler device and measured the tread on Ickes' tires. learning, they said, that each tire had 20,000-odd miles left except one with only 16,450.

Obviously, that doesn't add up to 27,500 more miles— unless one brings the spare into use by shifting every 2500 miles. The theory is that the right rear takes the worst beating. 38 per cent of the total wear, and the left front has the easiest life, bearing only 14 per cent of the burden. The right front rates 19 per cent and the left rear 29 per cent; you shift according to the tire gauge.

The Other Rules

But that isn't enough. The other 14 rules that you and Secretary Ickes must follow are:

Keep tires properly inflated; have wheel alignment checked regularly; have tires gauged every 2500 miles; don't drive at high speeds; reduce speed on curves; don't start rapidly; use brakes judiciously; avoid curbs; don't drive on flats or near-flats; drive safely enough to avoid even minor accidents; have small tire cuts repaired immediately; avoid grease on tires; prevent unequal tire wear; and be sure tires and tubes are properly mounted on wheels.

Standard Oil is worrying about these problems so that there will be someone left to buy gasoline next year—if there is any gasoline left to buy.

Europe Facing Its Hungriest Winter

By Dana Adams Schmidt
United Press Staff Writer

Ankara, Aug. 12.—Neutral observers who toured Europe during the summer reported today that the Continent is facing its hardest winter in history because of poor crops, transportation shortages and the Soviet-scorched earth policy which converted the Ukraine "bread basket" into a barren waste.

They said the pinch already is being felt even in Germany, where many persons go to bed as soon as they finish work to sleep through "the hungry hours."

Every mile the Germans advance through the Caucasus, they emphasized, aggravates the food situation at home because it means that more trains and more trucks must be diverted to carrying supplies to an ever-lengthening front.

Fear 'Third Front'

They said that German civilians are taking in their belts another notch as the fourth war winter approaches and are talking about the "third front"—the food front—which has been overshadowed by victories in Russia.

The Ukraine, they said, turned out to be a bitter disappointment as a source of food because the Russians took along all the farm machinery and man power when their armies retreated eastward.

The Balkan crops this year will be poor. Corruption in Rumania, bad organization in Bulgaria, guerilla fighting in Yugoslavia, and a shortage of transportation everywhere prevented the functioning of the Nazi system of legalized plunder. Guerilla warfare in Yugoslavia prevented most crops from even being sown.

In Greece, 15,000 tons of Canadian wheat plus some figs and fish from Turkey must feed a people who, before the war, imported 100,000 tons of wheat each month.

Neutral observers estimated that the Russian Maikop oil fields, in the midst of which fighting is progressing, formerly produced 2,500,000 tons of oil annually for the Soviet but that it will take the Germans a year before they can put them into operation.

The semiofficial Ankara newspaper, Ulus, said in a recent survey that 65 million people from the Atlantic to the Caucasus Mountains face unparalleled torture this winter.

Mrs. Roosevelt Gives Answer to Second-Front Pleas

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—While Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt was answering questions at a Hunter College forum today, several persons submitted queries asking why there was a delay in opening a second front.

At first the President's wife replied only that she was not a military expert but when the questioning persisted she said emphatically:

"All right. How much do you know about distances? About the ships available to transport supplies? About the ammunition, the guns and the supplies necessary for such a second front? Do you want a second front before you are sure about all these plans? Do you want a Dunkerque of American soldiers?"

Master Electrician, 4, Does It All 'Wif My Screwdriver'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

PUTTERER—Dennis Blakeslee, 4, and radio he fixed

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Aug. 12.—Need an A-1 electrician in your home or war plant?

The candidate is Dennis Blakeslee, aged—hold on—4.

A bed-lamp switch button stopped working. His father, no mechanic, resolved to fix it—some time.

Next day Dennis announced he had "fixed it"—and he had.

Then the console radio came up with only static—but while his mother was out of the room, Dennis fixed it. Sweet music.

The pilot light of a portable radio went out—but was working one day when Dennis' mother returned to the kitchen. Dennis, still keeping his trade secrets, again announced only:

"I fixed it wif my screwdriver."

The lamp switch and big radio aren't perfect jobs, but work okay, while the portable light glows nicely.

And on each clandestine repair job, Dennis has been plugged into 110 volts.

U. S. Ready to Call Troops in Strike

Board officials were working desperately for settlement of the walkout, still hopeful that it would not produce a showdown of their agency's authority.

In a telegram addressed to officials of Local 38 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Davis appealed to the strikers not to forget the "boys who are fighting for us in the Solomon Islands." The appeal produced no immediate results, however, and labor officials here claimed that the strike was called without authorization either of local or international officials of the union.

1100 Coal Miners Idle in Grundy, Va.

Grundy, Va., Aug. 12 (AP).—Mines of the H. E. Harman Coal Corp. remained idle today as the company's 1100 coal miners continued their strike in demand that two machine loaders be removed from the No. 2 mine.

More than a dozen State troopers were reported on duty here. State Police Sergt. H. H. Tucker said last night that the usual patrol had been supplemented by four or five men "just to control traffic in the immediate vicinity."

J. E. Biggs, jr., president of the company, said the machines were placed in sections of mines which had not been operated for two or three years and that all miners would be retained at their regular places. Increased demand for coal production brought about the change in the location of the machinery, he added.

Wool Warehouse Strike Closes Seven in Boston

Boston, Aug. 12 (AP).—A strike of 300 wool warehousemen affiliated with the United Textile Workers (A. F. L.) today affected seven Boston warehouses which hold war orders.

C. N. Atkinson Becomes Clerk of New Court

C. Newell Atkinson, former deputy clerk of the United States Court of Appeals, was sworn in yesterday as chief clerk of the recently created Municipal Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Atkinson, a resident of Washington since 1919, and a graduate of the National University Law School, took the oath of office from Chief Judge William E. Richardson. Also sworn in, as deputy clerk, was Miss K. Maurita Harvey, who formerly served as deputy clerk in the civil branch of District Court. She is a native Washingtonian and lives at 4700 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

The three-man tribunal will meet this morning with members of the District Bar Association, the Washington Bar Association, and the District Women's Bar Association to formulate rules of procedure for the new court, at Fourth and E Streets Northwest. Final approval by Judge Richardson and Associate Judges Nathan Cayton and Andrew M. Hood is expected next week.

Man Robbed of $30

Arthur McMiel, 23, who lives at the home of F. C. McCeney, 9808 Colesville Road, was returning home at 1:15 a. m. yesterday from work at the Engineer and Research Corp. in Riverdale, Md., when a man held him up at gun point and robbed him of $30 near Wire Avenue, Silver Spring.

Clark Gable's Hand Shakes As He Takes Private's Oath

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Aug. 12.—A nervous Clark Gable put aside the wealth and fame of Hollywood to enlist in the Army as a buck private.

What may be the last public appearance for some time of the idol of thousands of feminine movie fans took place high in the Federal Building, with half a floor roped off and guarded to insure privacy.

Gable, 41, listened intently as Col. Malcolm P. Andruss read the Army oath.

The screen star's hand was shaking noticeably as he raised it to say "I do" in a half-faltering voice.

"I hope you will serve with honor to yourself and your country," Colonel Andruss said when it was over. "I welcome you into the United States Army."

"Thank you, sir," Gable replied, with a wide smile and a handshake.

Gable will go to Miami, Fla., for three months' basic training, after which he hopes to enroll in officers' candidate school.

"I am very happy about it all," he said. "I have made application to be a gunner and I'm going to do my very best. There's nothing else to say."

Gable was inducted alone but immediately afterwards Colonel Andruss read the oath to the star's cameraman and close friend, Andrew J. McIntyre. They hope to see service together.

Lodge Seeks More Gas For Salesmen

By the Associated Press

Senator Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts said yesterday he had suggested to the Office of Price Administration that liberal rationing allowances for political candidates be reduced to give traveling businessmen more gasoline.

The Senator said in a statement that he had explained to Joel Dean of OPA's Rationing Division that the recent order depriving commercial travelers of adequate gasoline was destroying their livelihood, and requested that immediate relief be given to them."

"I have come to the conclusion that the only way to save the jobs of those who depend on automotive transportation is to get more gasoline into the New England area," he said. "One way to do this is successfully to meet the submarine menace, and another way is to establish nation-wide control over petroleum."

Meanwhile, what is hoped to be an answer to the problem of transporting gasoline and oil will get a preview this afternoon by high Government officials.

It is a new synthetic rubber lining for box cars to permit their use in carrying the fuel, development of the Glenn L. Martin Co., Baltimore, builders of aircraft.

The collapsible rubber containers provide facilities for using an ordinary steel box car to carry 13,500 gallons, almost a third again as much as is carried in the common tank car of cylindrical steel.

The transformation, Martin officials said, was effected by the development of the Martin Mereng cell originally used in 1936 as an airplane fuel tank.

An outgrowth of the original was the self-sealing fuel tank introduced in 1940 and since then made a standard installation on many types of aircraft.

The box car, outfitted for its demonstration in Indiana, is to be shown to Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, and other high Government and transportation official.

Biddle Receives Report on Escape Of Sniper Slayer

Attorney General Biddle yesterday said he would soon have "a definite comment" upon the escape of Eugene Eklund from two deputy United States marshals here while he was on trial for the lone sniper murders.

Biddle said he had received but not read the report of an investigation of the escape.

While Eklund was a fugitive, a District Court jury turned in a sealed verdict. He was recaptured after 36 hours and it was found that he had been convicted of second degree murder.

U. S. Gives Mexico 6 Million Credit For Steel Mill

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Moving to open up new sources of steel for war production, the United States last night extended a six million dollar credit to finance establishment of a steel mill at Monclova, Coahuila, Mexico.

Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones announced extension of the credit through the Export-Import Bank to the Altos Hornos Steel Plant Corporation. The Mexican government is underwriting repayment of the credit unconditionally. The funds will be handled through Nacional Financeria, S. A.

"The loan funds will cover the cost of new and second-hand equipment and materials and of services in the United States," Jones said. "Expenditures for Mexican materials, transportation and services are being met with proceeds for sale of stock of Altos Hornos de Mexico, S. A., in Mexico."

Shipyard Fires Loafers; Draft Board to Act

San Francisco, Aug. 12 (AP).—Acceding to a Navy request, the Moore Drydock & Shipbuilding Co. has discharged a half-dozen workers as chronic loafers or for not putting in a conscientious effort at their war work, a company spokesman disclosed.

Charles C. Adams, personnel director, said yesterday the action was taken after a letter from naval authorities prescribed a work or fight policy. Names of the men were turned in to their draft boards for possible reclassification.

Bethlehem Steel Co.'s shipbuilding division in San Francisco reported that "ever since Pearl Harbor and before we have been firing men who fail to turn in an honest day's work."

Dodge, Auto Magnate's, Son, Is Near Death

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 12.—John Duval Dodge, 43-year-old son of the late millionaire automotive manufacturer, John F. Dodge, lay near death in Receiving Hospital tonight.

Dr. Donald M. Morrill, hospital superintendent, said Dodge was suffering from a cerebral hemorrhage suffered while police were detaining him for questioning in a precinct station shortly after 3:30 a. m. today. The physician said Dodge had one chance in ten to live more than 24 hours.

Police said Dodge was taken to the precinct station after a woman reported she had seen a man pry a screen from the window of a neighbor's home.

Dodge was seized in the house, which police said was fully lighted. The owner of the home, Howard E. Lange, was absent. Later Lange said that "Dodge has been my good friend for 12 years and can come to my home any time he wants to, whether I'm there or not."

Prosecutor William E. Dowling, who investigated the incident, said he was seeking a companion who might have admitted Dodge to the Lange home. Dowling said he believed excitement before the arrival of police might have caused the hemorrhage and that his inquiry "thus far points away" from an earlier theory that Dodge became unduly excited by his arrest or suffered an accidental injury during his detention.

At Dodge's bedside was his wife, Mrs. Dora Kline Dodge, whom he married in 1933 a few weeks after his first wife, Marie O'Connor Dodge, obtained a divorce on charges of desertion.

Eldest son of the multi-millionaire, Dodge was left only $150 a month for life in the will of John F. Dodge, who died in 1920. He waived this monthly provision by accepting a $1,700,000 settlement offered by the other heirs.

Enemy Plane Over Iceland

Reykjavik, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—United States Army headquarters announced today that a German bomber appeared over western Iceland Tuesday afternoon.

(The censored dispatch did not say whether the plane made any attacks or was attacked.)

It was the third announcement of enemy aircraft activity over this American-garrisoned island in nine days. An alert was sounded at Akureyri, at the foot of Eyja Fjord on the north coast about 180 miles northeast of Reykjavik, but the plane did not pass over that area, the announcement said.

Eight More Lines Join Army Plan On Air Transport

The War Department announced yesterday that agreements between the air transport command and eight commercial air lines had completed mobilization of the Nation's entire air transport industry to speed delivery of supplies and personnel to the war fronts.

The companies represented in the new agreements, made with Brig. Gen. Harold L. George, commanding the air transport command, were Continental Air Lines, Colonial Air Ways, Chicago & Southern Air Lines, Delta Air Lines, Inland Air Lines, Mid-Continent Air Lines, National Air Lines and Pennsylvania Central Air Lines. Nine other companies already had signed agreements to participate in the international transport operations of the Army, operating military transport planes by contract with the transport command.

The plan for expansion of this service calls for immediate assignment of substantial numbers of additional aircraft to the air lines by the Army Air Forces, the department said.

Silver 'Nickels' Are Discarded By Treasury

By Irving Perlmeter
Associated Press Staff Writer

Treasury officials revealed yesterday that a boom in the value of silver had forced them to discard a plan to make five cent pieces out of a 50-50 combination of silver and copper.

Because some jewelers now are paying as high as 72 cents an ounce for silver, the mints discovered that the new coins might be worth more than five cents apiece, and people could melt them down and sell the metal at a profit.

The coin was designed last winter when there was no prospect that silver would be worth more than 35 cents an ounce. The metal in the coin, then, would have been worth about 4 cents, in accordance with the universal practice of making coins worth less than their face value.

None of the new coins ever were issued to the public, however, and the mints now are working out new designs which would cheapen the metal by diluting it with steel or "commercial manganese," or certain other metals which are cheaper than silver.

The old nickels, which were 25 per cent nickel and 75 per cent copper, haven't been minted since March because the War Production Board wanted to save both metals for war needs.

A decision will have to be made soon on the new jitney because the stockpile of old-type nickels built up by the mints before March is being depleted.

The high price of silver is due to what some officials call a squeeze resulting from the fact that all foreign silver, worth 35 cents an ounce, has been channeled by WPB priorities into war industries, forcing jewelers to outbid the Treasury for silver mined in this country, upon which Congress has set a statutory minimum price of 71.11 cents an ounce.

A. E. F. Soldier Replies To Attack Charge

Somewhere in England, Aug. 12 (AP).—Private Travis P. Hammond, on trial before a United States Army court-martial on a charge of assaulting a 16-year-old English shopgirl in an air raid shelter, testified today that the girl consented to his advances.

He took the stand after the court-martial inspected the shelter at the request of defense counsel.

AT SCENE OF FATAL ACCIDENT—Policeman J. S. Whitestone (left), Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Whitney Leary (right), traffic advisory council chairman, place a sign in Post Square warning pedestrians to use the crosswalks. It was in this section of Pennsylvania Avenue that 73-year-old Elizabeth Boland was killed by a streetcar Tuesday. The signs are being placed in an attempt to stop jaywalking, as the man and woman are doing in photo at top

In comparison with the number of streetcar-bus deaths in 1941, this year's figure is an increase of more than 100 per cent. Last year only 7 of 50 deaths for a corresponding period were caused by multipassenger carriers.

So far in 1942, only two operators of vehicles involved have been held responsible by coroner's juries and are awaiting trial under the negligent homicide act. One was the operator of a Virginia bus, the other a streetcar motorman whose car pinned a workman between it and another trolley at a car barn.

Another significant fact disclosed by the traffic statistics was that in 728 accidents involving streetcars and buses this year, 570 or 78 per cent, listed the public carriers as the "striking" vehicle.

Signs Placed Yesterday

The signs placed in Post Square yesterday were near the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office and in front of the temporary building housing the District Rationing Board. It is between these spots that the greatest dangers from traffic have been found to exist, it was stated.

"On many occasions the department has warned pedestrians against the danger of crossing the wide expanse of Pennsylvania Avenue between Thirteenth-and-a-Half and Fourteenth Streets Northwest," Director Van Duzer said, "They have repeatedly been cautioned to use the marked crosswalks."

During the busy hours of 3:30 to 6:30 yesterday, when traffic was heaviest in Post Square, Pvt. J. S. Whitestone of the Traffic Division, who was detailed to warn persons to use the crosswalks, cautioned more than 40 pedestrians for jaywalking and told them that they were violating the statutes by cutting directly across the street in the face of oncoming traffic.

Another spot observed to be of particular danger to jaywalkers was the area between Thirteenth and Thirteenth-and-a-Half Streets and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. During the peak of the rush hour yesterday hundreds of workers streamed from the Coast Guard and other offices in the old Southern Railway Building and scurried north across the Avenue to the trolley platform. This was in the face of heavy traffic coming east to the junction of E Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

The building entrances are directly opposite the loading platform and the crosswalk is several feet farther east.

Three persons were injured in traffic accidents yesterday and one, an 82-year-old man, became the third pedestrian to be struck by a streetcar within a week.

James J. Chrismore of 1445 Park Road Northwest, was in Emergency Hospital with head lacerations and body bruises suffered when struck by a southbound Capital Transit streetcar while crossing Fourteenth Street at New York Avenue at 5:30 p. m. The operator has been employed by the company for eight years.

Jappher N. Dillard, 35, no address except General Delivery, was struck by a truck at Seventh and Pennsylvania Northwest at 5 p. m. Dillard was treated for lacerations at Casualty Hospital.

Apparently struck by an automobile, Charles C. Bercaw, 74, of 1600 Hobart Street, was in Casualty Hospital with head injuries, his condition undetermined. He was found at Brentwood, Md. Police were undecided whether a hit-run driver was to blame.

Five-year-old Marvin Kassen of 4419 Georgia Avenue Northwest, received a possible skull fracture when he was struck by a truck while running through an alley. The child was taken to Children's Hospital.

Wool Buying Needs Acumen, Warns Expert

MARKED increase in the use of reworked and reused wool should make the housewife cautious in purchasing clothes this fall, according to Prof. Mary Evans, who is conducting studies on the utilization and care of textiles in the present emergency at the Columbia University summer session.

"Reused wool is wool from used clothing which has been stripped down to its filaments and re-woven into cloth," Professor Evans explains. "Reworked wool is new wool made from the clippings of the cutting room floors of dressmaking and tailoring establishments or from leftovers of yarns from the knitting mills. While these types of wool are serviceable, they do not wear as well as articles made from the full-length threads of new wool.

New Substitute

"A new substitute which is being made in this country from the casein of milk, will also be on sale this fall in the department stores, and there will continue to be available a small quantity of new all-wool articles.

"Labels on coats, suits and other clothing will show what type of wool has been used, but if a purchased article is not appropriately labeled, the saleslgirl should be asked for the information.

Watch Labels

"'I will read each label carefully,' should be the American housewife's most important rule guiding her purchasing of all clothing for the duration of the war. Faced with the necessity of prolonging the life of all wearing apparel, every woman should know what the composition and properties of various textiles are and their proper care, particularly since there will be many new synthetics on the market replacing the shortages of some of the more familiar materials."

Professor Evans says that with the expected scarcity of several dyes there will be a much greater use of white fabrics. This is already true of sheets, which can no longer be colored or made with colored hems.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 24, College Graduate, Not Unattractive, With Several Casual Admirers, Asks How to Come To Grips With Life; Feels It's Passing Her By

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In times like these, problems such as mine seem petty and out of place; but I feel that if I don't get advice now my mental outlook and consequently my life may be pretty badly warped. Although no Hedy LaMarr, I am not unattractive, 24 years old and a college graduate. My parents died when I was a child, and since then I have lived with a widowed great-aunt.

Aside from the "progressive" influencing and advice of two older sisters, who are now married and live in other cities, I grew up pretty much on my own, always with an introspective trend that has to be constantly resisted. I have succeeded, outwardly at least, in achieving an "extrovert" personality, to the extent that I am often called a "dynamic" personality,—a term that fits about as well as a six-fingered glove.

My job is semi-professional, involving work that a child could do; but it seems to keep me, and others on the staff, busy until 6:30 p. m. practically every night. I get home at 7 p. m., to prepare a quick dinner for my aunt and myself. She, incidentally, is now an invalid, and becoming quite apathetic toward life in general; and me in particular. Almost unbroken silence is the rule at home.

My social life is dull, to say the least. It consists of a movie or a "visit," about once a week, with a friend;—of whom I have many, thank God. Most of these friends are girls, the majority of whom are married. I do have a few casual men friends, all of whom are now in the service, which means that I don't see them often. However, there is one very attractive young man whom I have known for several years, who asks me, regularly and distinterestedly, for a date about once a fortnight. There are times when I feel a passionate longing for him; when I am sure I am in love with him; but this feeling leaves immediately when we are together. We do not complement each other mentally or emotionally, and so I am sure the relationship will not lead to marriage.

By now, you have probably guessed the problem. I am experiencing the rather horrible sensation of "missing out" on life. At 24, I am still young, I know, but by now there certainly should be some hope on the horizon; some bright future dawning; or, better still, a present that can be lived to the fullest. While I was in college and for the first year after I had a zest for living that made every moment glorious; but gradually that vital awareness of the beauty of living has left me, until now I feel I am just existing; not living at all. A dull film seems to have dropped over everything.

I have capabilities, I know, that are going to rot. I am worthy of experiences, I know, that elude me. I have a deep desire to love and be loved that is going unanswered. I have tried reading myself out of this rut; but I think I have read too much already. I am tired of introspective analysis; tired of doing nothing but "understanding" my problems. I know that if I don't act now, while I am still young and unfraid, I shall sink gradually into a deeper rut, from which I cannot emerge. And I am determined not to go through life a futile spinster. I want to be married; and I want to experience life to the fullest,—mentally, physically and spiritually.

Please tell me what action I can take which would at least point in that direction. It would not be convenient for either of my married sisters to make a home for my aunt; and in all probability, she will live on, an invalid, for 10 years or more. And as for doing volunteer war work,—as a way of getting interested in something bigger than myself, which I know would be wonderfully helpful,—my only time for such is between the tired hours of 8 to 10 o'clock at night. I have tried to change jobs, with no success as yet; and my salary is my only source of income. But because of your intelligent outlook on life, I feel sure you can help me, as you have helped others.

W. B. S.

Limited Chance to Stake Lien on Larger Life

DEAR W. B. S.: As has been said, "The Lord helps those who help themselves." All things considered, it seems to me a change of professional scene is your best (perhaps your only) hope of establishing a lien on a larger life, at present. You say you have tried—but unsuccessfully so far—to secure more interesting work, which naturally would include (because attracting) more interesting associates. And that down beat remark of yours reminds me of still another saying: "If at first you don't succeed, then try, try again."

The "round peg in the square hole" wage earner who bemoans his occupational misplacement today is simply publicizing his lack of initiative. Since the Nation started gearing itself to an "all-out" war effort, industry and the professions have been coping with what is known as an "employes' market"—which is something new in most employes' experience. This is in part due to the fact that man power by the millions is now being detailed into the fighting forces—which leaves all sorts of excellent jobs going begging for competent takes, with women the logical contenders for place.

Also, of course, the emergency development and ceaseless expansion of Federal agencies, Army auxiliary services, etc., create virtually endless demand for the services of intelligent, well educated, trustworthy young people who may be classified as employable for the duration—which definitely puts the finger on capable young women who are obliged to be self-supporting.

So, cut out your consolation reading and address yourself to a relentlessly systematic study of job opportunities that meet your requirements—with the invincible purpose of landing one directly connected with the war program, if that kind of job appeals to you as relief from frustration, because taxing your energies to the fullest is a vital, selfless cause. By way of launching the job hunt, see Miss Katherine Blackburn, chief of the Bureau of Public Inquiries, in the United States Information Service headquarters at Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. Her telephone number is EXecutive 3300, extension 24, and she is in her office from 9:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m. these days.

In response to urgent public demand, Miss Blackburn and her staff for some time past have been working to channel employable persons into compatible positions—by keeping posted on jobs opening up in Government service, and passing this information along to those who request it. I have mentioned your situation to Miss Blackburn, and she promises to do all in her power to put your feet on the right road, professionally.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

One-Dish Meals Meet Demand Of Impromptu Occasions

AN OLD face in a new frame that satisfied the appetites of hungry impromptu guests was corned beef hash. The night was rainy, the hour was late, and the men in the party were clamoring for food.

But the hostess was not to be daunted in appeasing their appetities. From her emergency shelf she took 2 cans corned beef and a can of tiny potatoes. This was the starting point of a meal that was pronounced "righto."

The menu consisted of the following: corned beef hash, green tossed salad, hot biscuits, honey, fresh peaches and cream and hot coffee. The following is the way she prepared the hash:

Corned-Beef Hash

Mix 2 cans corned beef with 1 No. 2 can new potatoes, drained and chopped. Add ½ cup milk, 2 tablespoons butter, salt and pepper. Transfer to a low buttered casserole and make 4 depressions on the top with a large stirring spoon. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees for 15 minutes. Remove, break one egg into each depression, dot with butter, sprinkle with salt and pepper and 1 tablespoons dried parsley. Bake in a medium oven, 350 degrees, for 15 minutes or until eggs are set. Serves 4.

It is always well to have more than one dish in mind that can be assembled in record time. Baked Eggs with Crabmeat is such a dish. You may think it a bit tedious to pick over the crabmeat and removed the stiff membranes, but it pays dividends. Serve a salad in individual salad bowls, annointed with sour cream. Serve with cucumbers, sliced onions and radishes, and tomatoes if desired. This is the recipe:

Baked Eggs With Crabmeat

Pick over the crabmeat and remove all the stiff membrane from 1 8-ounce can crabmeat or 1 package frozen crabmeat. Beat 8 eggs slightly, add ½ cup milk and salt and pepper and beat a little more. Stir in the crabmeat and pour into 4 individual buttered casseroles. Cover and bake in a medium oven, 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Serves four.

It's About Time

It's about time if you still have your girlish figure, to try the junior miss department for undies, slips, pajamas and shoes. Don't let this possible source of clothing go undiscovered. When winter comes, keep this in mind for warm jersey undies.

Varied Diet Will Preserve Your Teeth

By Ida Jean Kain

YOUR dentist can take a look at your false teeth and almost tell what your nutrition has been like over a period of years.

And on the basis of your present eating habits he can tell about how many teeth you'll have left when you reach the half-century mark.

If he spots too many cavities, he may take you to task while you are in his power. He will ask: "Don't you like milk? What about your green vegetables?

"Oh, sure, I like milk," you will say, as soon as you get the chance. "I don't even mind spinach."

"Is that so? How much milk do you drink?"

"Now, let me see. I drank some milk last week and I had spinach just the other day."

"Hmmm. I thought as much. Do you have orange juice every morning for breakfast?"

"Yes, I have it every morning I have breakfast. You know how it is. Some mornings you get up late. Does orange juice help your teeth?" Anything to keep him from probing!

Share of Vitamins

He will tell you that you need orange juice for the vitamin C, which helps to utilize the calcium and phosphorus you get from milk. But you need other vitamins, too. You need Vitamins A and D, so what about butter, cream and eggs? ? Do you get your share?

You squirm and give him a look that is one part pain and one part fury before he eases up. As soon as you are equal to conversation you tell the man: "I try to keep away from some of those foods. They are fattening, you know, and a girl has to think about her figure."

He mutters something that, above the hum of the drill, sounds like, "Women are such fools." Then, louder: "Well, if you won't eat butter or take cream, you can eat green and yellow vegetables. Full of vitamin A. And you ought to get out in the sun."

"I thought that was to prevent rickets."

But, as he goes on to tell you, you need sun for vitamin D to utilize your minerals, and you should store up plenty in the summer.

"Now, how long has this tooth been bothering you?" he will inquire as he really goes to town.

You confess that it hurt you a few months back, but then it quit and didn't start again until day before yesterday.

Pain a Danger Signal

"Don't you know pain is a danger signal? You should have come in when it first hurt. I'll have a hard time saving it. At this rate, you'll have false teeth by the time you are 50!"

That scares you. You want the entire list of foods that will help you keep your second set. Here's the list you should have daily: At least two glasses of milk, or one glass and a serving of cheese; a glass of orange juice, a green or yellow vegetable and a cooked salad; whole grain bread. For exercise, eat the crusts and have hard rolls occasionally and eat the skins of baked patatoes.

"That's all for today. Come back Tuesday!"

Melon Appetizer

Here's a new melon trick—ball or cube melons (any kind), soak half an hour in French dressing to cover. Arrange on crisp shaved greens and sprinkle with shaved or broken pecans, Brazil nuts or English walnuts mixed with equal portions of diced celery. Pass more French dessing. This can go as an appetizer or salad course.

Turret-crown Cloche

Here's the smart "high" crown brightly done in felt, with a gay patch of contrast colored fringed suede pointing up its stunning "turret" crown. You'll love its extreme newest and coo at the becomingness of its demure cloche brim. Do have it now! . . .

Glorious color combinations:

Black with Kelly or Red suede. Navy with Sky Blue suede. Brown or Patriot Green with Ming orange suede.

MRS. BENJAMIN BIAYS

GARDEN BUG—

Mrs. Benjamin Biays, Whose Hobby Is Victory Garden, Gets Practical Results

By Carolyn Bell

Although she insists she is a complete novice, blonde outdoorish-looking Mrs. Benjamin Biays admits that since the beginning of April she has fed a family of 18 from her garden. Once the "dump heap" of the Tuxeden estate, it now gayly sprouts lettuce, broccoli, beets, beans, et al.—much to the former Elsie Tuckerman's amazement.

Daily the pretty, as well as energetic, member of the Tuckerman clan plows, rakes and weeds in her victory garden which is adjacent to the family homestead in Bethesda, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman.

"We have bought nary a vegetable since spring," says Mrs. Biays, meaning those who make their home at Tuxeden as well as her own family of four who live in a cunning white home in what was once the apple orchard. "I had to send my horse to Virginia," she laughed, "for I no longer have time to exercise him."

Speaking of horses, Mrs. Biays is not confining her talents to gardening. In her pleasant, pastel tinted living room she amuses herself by painting horses. Sometimes with their riders astride and often the horse alone. "I do them mostly from photographs—and it's lots of fun," she said. This during her spare hours. As if a woman with two youngsters, a house to run, and a victory garden had any!

But back to the garden: "I am pretty proud of that fence," said Mrs. Biays pointing to the enclosure. Seems she salvaged the wood from the grape arbor to build the fence and added laughingly "the best post-hole digger in Montgomery County."

"Oh, that's Sherry's melon patch," in answer to a question about some rather important looking vines. Sherry, age 7 and the daughter of the household, seems to share her mother's enthusiasm for gardening. Young "Tucky," who is just over 9, is not quite as enthused but did manage to plant some pumpkins which he is looking forward to eating up long about frost. "We had so much lettuce—that Sherry had the lettuce concession in the neighborhood," said the child's mother. And with her sale of lettuce the youngster has fast added to her book of defense stamps.

Mrs. Biays has had extraordinary luck with her beets, for several neighbors (also with gardens) have come to her for seedlings. She experimented with peas, but that was not so successful. Trying to use the shady end of the garden she decided to put in late peas, but they were neither tender nor sweet.

"I just play nursemaid to these vegetables all the time," she concluded, "but its fun."

A fine portrait is a good companion . . . especially in these days of family separations.

You'll be surprised how much a good photograph of your soldier or sailor in uniform will do to fill the vacant place in the family circle.

By the same token, photographs of the home folks keep the fighting man in touch with home. They are a bit of home he can take wherever duty calls, dispelling loneliness, raising morale.

The occasion demands only the best—yet they need not be expensive. Underwood and Underwood portraits are reasonably priced, and always good. In this studio quality comes first.

War Relief For Russia Aided Here

The rushing of aid to Russia goes on apace in the Capital. Last evening Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Rattner acted as cohosts with Mrs. Margaret Hatfield-Shire at a buffet supper for the benefit of Russian war relief. The gathering took place in Mrs. Hatfield-Shire's home in Georgetown.

About 40 Washingtonians were in the group last evening which was entertained by a singer from the Russian Orthodox Church. The food too was Russian during an evening that was a tribute to the courage of the Red Army.

'ABSURD!'—

Says Embassy Spokesman of Rumors Concerning Recall of Argentine Envoy

"Quite absurd," says an Embassy spokesman of the oft-repeated rumor that the Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil, will not return to this country as envoy following a jaunt to his homeland.

For the first time in five years the suave, dapper Espil is going to the Argentine. The strained relations between the South American country and the United States undoubtedly have much to do with his quickly decided trip. Norman Armour, United States Ambassador to Buenos Aires, has been in town to report to the State Department.

With Senora de Espil, the Ambassador will leave the latter part of the week. They have shipped their winter clothes ahead (as planes allow only 40 pounds of luggage) for it is winter in South America now. They plan to fly the Atlantic Coast route down and by way of variety will take the West Coast plane back, expecting to land in Washington in the middle of September.

It was to attend the historic conference in Buenos Aires in 1936—attended by President Roosevelt—that Espil last made the trip to the Argentine. The conference was called the Inter-American Conference for Maintenance of Peace.

Senora de Espil only recently returned from Hot Springs where she has been spending the summer and where the hardworking envoy has been able to join her for an occasional weekend.

Yesterday the Espils were feted at a small party with Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins as hostess. Mrs. Robbins gathered in a few of their close friends—she is Argentine by birth—to bid "farewell" to the couple. The party was given at her home on Woodland Drive.

Local Boy Makes Good As McAuliffe Wins Stars

By Patricia Grady

When the Army list of promotions came out this week, Washington knew that it had another case of local boy makes good on its hands when Col. A. C. McAuliffe exchanged his eagles for the silver stars of a brigadier general.

"Both of us were born and raised in the Capital," proudly states Mrs. McAuliffe in the full knowledge that "natives" are getting scarcer and scarcer in these parts. "We both went to Eastern High School and were married here in my parents home."

For the last three years the McAuliffes have been stationed in the Capital, the first time that they have been here in an official capacity since General McAuliffe went into the service after his graduation from West Point in 1918. But, in true Army style, they have covered the North American continent in the course of the newly appointed general's military career—San Francisco, Monterey, Kansas, Oklahoma, Washington State, and two tours of duty in Hawaii.

The last time the McAuliffes were in Hawaii was between 1932 and 1936. They don't like to think about the tragic changes that war has caused there. Nor of the many friends they had there.

With his new appointment comes a change of scene for General McAuliffe. He will be leaving soon to join the air-borne unit in Louisana. But his wife and two children—Patricia, 21, and John, 19—will stay on in Washington. Their friends are here and so are their interests.

Mrs. McAuliffe has been a busy warworker for many months. She devotes a part of her week to Gallinger Hospital, where she pursues her duties as a Red Cross Gray Lady. Other days are taken up with canteen work at the AWVS and selling war stamps and bonds. Daughter Patricia serves a daily stint at the AWVS, where she has a full day in the headquarters as an office assistant. And John is planning on doing his bit in the war, too. He has his eye on following in his father's footsteps. He hopes to enter West Point next year.

Big Things Planned for Air Youth

"Planes . . . release pilots from civilian duties . . . training American youth . . . victory."

Snatches of conversation came from a table at La Salle du Bois yesterday where Mrs. Clarence Morton Goodwin, chairman of the Women's Auxiliary for Air Youth, met for luncheon with a small group of her committee to talk over their future plans. Big things seemed to be in the wind as Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Paul McNutt and Mrs. Leonard Firestone entered into the discussion of organizing the youth of this country for training under the National Aeronautics setup.

Mrs. E. Swift Newton Here From Philadelphia

Purpose of the get-together was to give a few members of Mrs. Goodwin's committee a chance to meet and talk to Mrs. E. Swift Newton, who is in the Capital from Philadelphia for a few days. She is a member of the Air Youth organization and is also on the National Executive Committee of the Girl Scouts of America and is the Girl Scouts' commissioner in Philadelphia. She is here not only to talk aeronautics with Mrs. Goodwin but to visit her daughter, Miss Audrey Newton, who is taking a special course from the Red Cross in Washington to prepare her for overseas duty with that organization. Both Mrs. Newton and her daughter are staying at the Hay-Adams.

Mrs. Goodwin To Leave Soon

Mrs. Goodwin is planning to leave Washington shortly for her home in Forest Hills. She was scheduled to leave the Capital early this week, but her husband has had a leg in a cast since a stair railing broke under him last week. They will probably be off to Forest Hills towards the end of the week. Then it will be back to Washington for Mrs. Goodwin early in the fall to make final plans for a big aeronautical program later on in the season.

Photogenic Photographer To Organize AWVS Section

Harris & Ewing

Mrs. Edwin Herzog—

Newly Arrived in Town, But Already Busy on Plans for New Project

By Peggy Preston

She looks like a photographer's model, but Mrs. Edwin Herzog is more apt to be seen on the other side of the lens, operating her speed-graphic with the assurance of a veteran newsman.

In town only five weeks, the attractive wife of an Army Air Corps major has already offered her time and talent to the organizing of a photographic section for the AWVS and is hard at work on the project. And this despite the fact that she has been more than occupied with the trials of transplanting her family and household from their native New York to Washington for the duration.

The proposed section is a comparatively new idea with the national AWVS organization. So far it has been tried out only in the New York headquarters where Mrs. Herzog was formerly affiliated. Its object will be to train women in the art of medical photography and other phases of the business pertinent to the war effort which up to now has been done almost entirely by men.

If present plans work out classes in photography will begin at the headquarters here early in September when it is expected that equipment and laboratories will be set up and ready for students. Among those who will assist in instructing the classes will be another New Yorker, Mrs. W. W. White, also a newcomer to Washington who has had previous experience in work of this kind with the New York chapter.

Both Major and Mrs. Herzog, who are making their home at the Dorchester House, have long been interested in the fine art of photography. Mrs. Herzog is a graduate of the School of National Photography in New York and has her own dark room and an extensive array of equipment.

However, the real artistic talents of the family, she feels, belong to her 8-year-old daughter, Felicia, who is by way of becoming a real pianist. Felicia has studied with private tutors in New York for three years and will continue her pursuit here this winter after she returns from a summer camp.

Mrs. Herzog finds Washington much to her liking and despite a lifelong residency in New York claims that she hasn't given the big city a thought since she arrived.

Montgomery Draft Sorting Task Ended

Completion of the classification of practically all registrants of the first, second and third registrations by Montgomery County elective Service Board No. 3 for Bethesda-Chevy Chase was announced yesterday by Frederick P. Lee, chairman.

Classification cards will be sent to the registrants within the next few days. All of the single registrants physically qualified and without dependents or occupational deferments either have been inducted or are in the August and September quotas.

The limited number of single 1-B men also will be inducted this month.

The board now is proceeding to send its local examining physicians for physical examinations and to reclassify in Class 1-A certain registrants who heretofore have been classified as Class 3-A or Class 3-B by reason of dependency, Lee said. These are the registrants who are single, or if married are not living with wife or child and have not received occupational deferment.

In reclassifying this group, the new Government system of dependency allowances have been considered in determining whether or not dependency will continue to exist. Registrants in this group formerly in Class 2-A will be inducted prior to those formerly in Class 3-B, the chairman said.

Warrants Served In Test Violations

Five Silver Spring business establishments, including the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad station, were served warrants charging violation of the Montgomery County blackout ordinance in Monday nights unannounced blackout. Residents of the county had been warned that lights left in homes and business establishments unattended would be violations if an alarm was sounded.

The warrants were served to: E. L. Kerr, Hazzard Shoe Store; Robert Miller, Ward Radio; E. Parlaman, A. & P. Grocery Store in the Shopping Center; Marion Hafferman, Nor-Bud Shop, and M. M. Barton, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad station.

Japs Say These Are American Prisoners of War

WAINWRIGHT SAID TO BE AMONG THEM—Japanese sources identify this picture received yesterday by way of Lisbon and London as showing Americans held in a Jap prison camp after the surrender of Corregidor. Canada's Air Chief in London

London, Aug. 12 (AP).—Canada's Air Minister, C. G. Power, arrived in London today, joining the growing group of Allied military leaders and technical experts now in the United Kingdom. It was said Power will spend ten days or two weeks in Britain, inspecting Royal Canadian Air Force units.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that Brig. Gen. G. M. Barnes, chief of the United States War Department design section, has arrived at the head of a technical mission to work with the British in correlating American and British fighting material.

Police Return Accused Boxer To Paterson, N. J.

Patrick Edward (Pat) Comiskey, heavyweight boxer who had been scheduled to fight in a semifinal bout here Monday night, was returned to Paterson, N. J., yesterday in the custody of New Jersey police to answer a charge of rape.

Arrested in a downtown hotel Monday, Comiskey waived a removal hearing and was turned over to Passaic County officers by Lieut. Clyde N. Strange, chief of the fugitive squad.

Helen Jepson Wins Custody of Daughter

Mineola, N. Y., Aug. 12 (AP).—Helen Jepson, Metropolitan Opera singer, today won custody of her 9-year-old daughter, Sallie, during summer months in an agreement reached with George Possell, her former husband, in the chamber of Supreme Court Justice Meier Steinbrink.

While the mother is following her musical career during the winter, the child is to stay with Possell at his Seaford, Long Island, home.

Army Bombers Kept Aloft As Pups Are Born on Runway

The telegraph news wires carried these briefs yesterday:

Seeing a dog on the field, the Albuquerque Army Air Base control tower operator held several bombers aloft. Military police dashed to clear the runway.

The M. P.'s arrived in motorcycle and sidecar, just as three pups were born. The mother, ancestry uncertain, was as wild as a coyote and fled into the nearby sandhills. To an Albuquerque home went the pups.

Down came the bombers.

Colorado's supposed to have a primary election September 8, says H. F. Sweeney, Denver election commission secretary, but—

"The eligible voters won't register.

"We can't get judges or clerks. "We've had to hire people to go from door to door begging people to put in polling places."

Lieut. E. S. Ott ordered Corpl. Fred Angell to get him a pack of cigarettes. Angell hiked 5 miles but found the canteen closed. That was in France in 1918.

Sunday Brig. Gen. E. S. Ott, at Medford, Oreg., will receive his cigarettes from civilian Fred Angell—who has just learned where his one-time commander is.

A continent and a couple of oceans may separate Alan and Lester Earl—but when it comes to taste they're close as peas in a pod.

Their mother, Mrs. Lloyd Earl of Conshohcken, Pa., received picture cards from both boys in the same mail, one postmarked from a southern United States camp, the other from a foreign port. The pictures were identical.

Don't all shout at once, but W. C. Caley, a Philadelphia haircurler manufacturer, has 28,000 pounds of rubber he doesn't know what to do with.

It's been processed into a form known as "scorched" rubber. The Army can't use it, the wholesaler won't take it back, and scrap dealers can't pay him what it's worth.

Caley would gladly use the stuff himself, but the War Production Board says it's still rubber and won't let him.

The Marion, Ark., U. S. O. and J. A. McKnight lost in the political race for the treasurer of Crittenden County.

McKnight promised that if elected he would give the $5000 annual salary to the servicemen's organization. Unofficial returns gave McKnight 974 votes from 20 of the 22 precincts, his opponent, Grover C. Glenn, 1907.

'Mrs. Miniver,' at Last, Arrives at Loew's Palace

With Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon Costarred, This Picturization of the Jan Struther Book Is One of the Cinema's Supreme Achievements

"MRS. MINIVER." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the book by Jan Struther, adapted to the screen by Arthur Wimperis, George Froeschel, James Hilton and Claudine West, costarring Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, with Teresa Wright, Richard Ney, Dame May Whitty, Reginald Owen, Henry Travers, Tom Conway, Henry Wilcoxon, Brenda Forbes, Christopher Severn, Clare Sandars, Marie de Backer, Helmut Dantine, John Abbott, Connie Leon and Rhys Williams. Directed by William Wyler. At Loew's Palace Theater.

THE LONG-AWAITED HOUR has struck. "Mrs. Miniver" opens this morning at Loew's Palace Theater.

Heralded as one of the genuinely distinguished pictures of all time, this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film version of the Jan Struther book completely justifies the most extravagant encomiums that have been showered upon it.

Here, woven into a flawless dramatic fabric, are all of the emotions, the beauty, romance, humor and tragedy of life in a sturdy little English village, pitched against the tortured background of Britain's indomitable struggle for survival in the face of a relentless enemy. The heroic story is told in no thundering terms of battlefront action, but through the gradually changing human relationships of a wide range of characters, whose simple, community activities inevitably merge with the larger and more ominous panorama of savage world conflict.

Always the war seems distant. Yet as the drama of "Mrs. Miniver" unfolds, its direct bearing upon every man, woman and child in a tranquil and peaceful countryside is poignantly and powerfully stressed in an awakening of those qualities of mind and heart that must not be permitted to perish from the earth. It is an object lesson contrived with enormous skill.

Pursues Cumulative Course

The dramatic narrative loosely derived from Miss Struther's sketches of episodes in the life of Mrs. Miniver, by Arthur Wimperis, George Froeschel, James Hilton and Claudine West, pursues a course of mounting interest, suspense and power, unfailingly set off by the little human foibles that make it a universal and monumental reflection of life as it is lived, rather than as it is idealized by an imaginative mind.

The story is introduced by the naively amusing confessions that Mr. and Mrs. Miniver have been inexcusably extravagant that day by buying a new car and a new hat, respectively. On her arrival home from the city, the suburban station master discloses to Mrs. Miniver the rose he has named in her honor and plans to exhibit at the flower show in competition with the dowager Lady Beldon, whose blooms always win. The Miniver son returns from college, full of years and profound philosophies, and falls embarrassingly in love with Lady Beldon's granddaughter, a mesalliance of astounding proportions in many eyes, especially Lady Beldon's. The younger Minivers are disturbed because their pet cat "wants to throw up."

Then the rumble of war and the crisis of Dunkirk, for which all of the privately owned power boats are commandeered, and Clem Miniver's response to the call, while his son takes on with the R. A. F. In the absence of her family, a Nazi flier drops down on the Miniver estate and Mrs. Miniver matches her courage with her men's. Lady Beldon's wrath grows as her social structure seems to crumble, with the strange love of her granddaughter and the effrontery of the station master. The bombings pretty conclusively settle the matter of caste with their tragic tolls, and the flower show, of a sudden, becomes a triviality instead of the annual high point in the community life of the village.

In the memorial service, with which the picture closes on an exalted note, the village vicar, in a brief passage of exquisite tenderness and deep wisdom, speaks the voice of the civilized world in explaining why all of the pain, the anguish and the sacrifices must be endured and surmounted by those who would not see freedom vanquished.

Is Faultlessly Cast and Acted

A "war picture" only by implication, and the one vivid scene in the bomb shelter, "Mrs. Miniver" above all is a salute to fortitude, courage and the unconquerable spirit upon which the world must rely for its existence as a fit place in which to live.

To the visualization of this finely fashioned drama, superb talents have been brought. Greer Garson's performance of the title role is marked by naturalness, depth, power and infinite charm. The blood of Spartans courses through her veins. There is humor, gayety, tenderness and great wisdom in her conduct of her household and the larger events in which she becomes involved. As natural, convincing and quietly realistic is Walter Pidgeon's portrayal of Clem Miniver, in whom are epitomized the spirit and unostentatious valor of free men everywhere. Teresa Wright, perfectly cast as Carol Beldon, and Richard Ney, a newcomer, as efficient in the role of Vin Miniver, give the picture's romance youth, lift and a glowing warmth. Dame May Whitty, the Lady Beldon, and Henry Travers. Mr. Ballard, the station agent and horticulturist, dispose handsomely of the vexing item of caste, and little Christopher Severn and Clare Sandars play the juvenile Minivers with a disarming display of adorable precocity—something which, at times, it is difficult to adore. The soaring spirit of the piece is carried into the servants' quarters by the admirable gifts of Brenda Forbes and Rhys Williams.

William Wyler's direction is no less than inspired in its encompassment of the full range of human emotions, without exaggeration or distortion, and Herbert Stothart has supplied a musical setting of great value to the picture's every mood.

"Mrs. Miniver" is the best of the best.

And Mrs. Miniver Was Unafraid

HELMUT DANTINE AND GREER GARSON as the German flier and the heroine of the title, in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film version of Jan Struther's "Mrs. Miniver," now on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Walter Pidgeon is costarred with Miss Garson and Teresa Wright and Dame May Whitty importantly cast

HEDDA HOPPER

That War of Nerves!

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 12.—Jack Benny's new producer-starring deal with United Artists is the biggest of its kind since Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks broke away from major studios to form United Artists.

OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND

Well, what will happen to our greatest worrier when he hits his stride as a producer and actor remains to be seen. Even when he has nothing to do but an air show, by the week's end he looks like Mickey Mouse trying to catch his own tail.

Following in the recent footsteps of Jimmy Cagney and Charles Boyer, his action should really be giving our major producers a headache, 'cause it's dollars to doughnuts other stars will follow suit. Everybody knows that the stars draw the money, and not the producers' names.

Walt Disney was certainly happy when he received a cable from Zurich, Switzerland, signed by Felix Salten, author of "Bambi." It's the first time in two years anybody here has heard from him.

When Hitler came to power, all of Salten's books were destroyed, because their tenderness toward animals and lessons in compassion were declared "enervating to German youth."

In the cable, Felix wrote: "I look for the day when the people of Europe will once again know freedom and be able to see all your American pictures. Good luck, and love to Bambia."

Olivia de Havilland will blow her own horn from now on. She's bought herself a saxophone, of all things, and is taking lessons tooting it.

Pere Westmore and Carol Bruce may not be engaged, but he's taking his vacation in New York to be near her.

Ernest Anderson, the colored service boy who got a good part in "In This Our Life" through Bette Davis, enters the Army on the thirteenth.

I hear that Mrs. Harrison Tweed, former wife of Jack Barrymore, and mother of Diana, will publish a small volume of Jack's most beautiful love letters to her. On the cover she'll use Sargent's drawing of Jack, the original of which has mysteriously disappeared.

Lady Mendl has bought a Spanish house a couple of doors from mine, which from now on will be her permanent home. "But," says she, "by January 1, when I move in, it will have had its face lifted, and it will be Georgian."

Crosby Puts Okay On Hope's Change

For a scene in "Road to Morocco" Bob Hope is required to drink a mysterious potion, cry out, "Well, Ili be a monkey's uncle!" and leave his place at Bing Crosby's side, after which an undersized chimpanzee, dressed as Bob is dressed, takes Hope's place beside Crosby, thus making it appear that Hope's inadvertently expressed wish has been granted.

"But you'll have to stand very still throughout the changing of places, Bing," warned Director Dave Butler.

"You're making a monkey out of Hope and you think I won't stand still for that?" quipped Bing. "Try me, brother, I'm a statue."

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Hollywood to Remake French Hit

Hollywood, Aug. 12 (INS).—The French artist, Raimu, made an unforgettable impression on everyone who saw him in "The Baker's Wife." Unfortunately, Raimu cannot speak a word of English or he would have been in Hollywood months ago.

BING CROSBY

Now there is another French picture, "The Man Who Seeks the Truth," with Raimu, and again the Frenchman attracts attention. So Buddy de Sylva has bought the movie outright and will remake it, as Walter Wanger remade "Pepe Le Moko" into the smash hit, "Algiers."

When I talked with Buddy he hadn't made up his mind who is to get to play the Raimu role. He thought Bing Crosby—which puzzled me considerably, since Raimu and Bing are about as much alike as Charlie Chaplin and Charles Boyer. Then, again, Buddy is considering Henry Fonda, whom he would borrow from Twentieth. Haven't seen the picture but it must be an elastic role.

A new and completely different Nero is promised us by Arthur Hornblow, jr., in "Quo Vadis." Nero, according to Arthur, was not the cross old man as so often pictured. "He was a man of terrific power and strength," says Arthur, "and wasn't old at all. In fact he was only 23 when he killed himself and were, during most of his lifetime, a red beard." Who are you or I to argue with Arthur, who is sticking to his story after months of research?

And here I thought all the time Nero looked like Charles Laughton. Alfred Lunt was offered the role, but he had to bow out of this and "The Moon Is Down" because he's opening in a new show.

Clark Gable, idol of thousands, today was sworn into the United States Army as a private. He leaves immediately for Florida to become a gunner in the Air Force. After the necessary training he will go into the combat zone, where he will be shoulder-to-shoulder and side-by-side with Johnny Jones and others of Uncle Sam's large family of privates. Gable has certainly proved his mettle and our admiration goes to him. He didn't bother to wait for a commission, so determined was he to get in the Army at any cost. And he's going at it the hard way. Actors like Gable, who have had the world at their feet and who want to do their part for Uncle Sam, the same as any of the other boys, deserve the highest praise any of us can give them.

My pal, Jane Withers, must have some agent blood in her veins. When Janie checked onto the Republic lot for "Johnny Doughboy," she started plugging for a young former extra boy, Pat Brook, to play her leading man. "Tut, tut," said the bosses in effect, "we don't care how well an extra boys sings or dances. We want a name." That's where Jane's 10 per cent blood came out—and also one of the cutest stunts I ever heard of... Today was Director Johnny Auer's birthday and imagine his surprise when the most talented "messenger" boy he ever heard sing (and dance) showed up to sing him "Happy Birthday." He called the studio immediately that he had the "find" of the year.

Do I need to go on? You guessed it—the boy was Janie's protege, Pat, and he gets the lead!

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random: Friends of the Sol Wurtzels will be glad to hear there is talk of a reconciliation; Judy Garland's little sister in "Presenting Lily Mars" is played by Annabelle Logan, Ella's 11-year-old daughter.

Little

Many important events of the last ten years, which at the time of their occurrence seemed to have no bearing on one another, are tied up neatly in a British-made picture entitled "After Mein Kampf," which traces Adolf Hitler's rise to power. This Little Theater attraction, now in its second week, is composed of narration, stills, some historical newsreels of the German army on the march and a series of dramatic scenes performed by an enonymous cast of English actors.

Among some surprising facts to come to life pictorially are Hitler's career as a bogus artist and his ruthless policy which allowed him to stop at nothing, including the murder of some of his closest associates. There are some excellent shots of Hitler as an orator who could rouse the most passive minded of German citizens. The trial of Von der Lubbe, the murder of Roehm and Chancellor Dolfuss of Austria and scenes of religious persecution are all effectively enacted.

The question mark, which is the concluding note of the picture, should decide once and for all the policy of any fence straddlers who may still be doubtful about the one remaining course to be taken.

RKO-Keith's

The popularity with which "The Pride of the Yankees" is being met is a tribute both to the memory of baseball's immortal Lou Gehrig and the truthful, living portrayal of the man which is given by Screen Star Gary Cooper.

Already in its third week, the picture is giving all indications of being a record-breaker. While often accused of lacking the necessary color which seems to be a primary requisite of professional ball playing, the life of Gehring as revealed on the screen is not only colorful, but dramatic as well. The plain story of a man who lived honorably and died courageously will always find a place in the hearts of Americans.

Teresa Wright, remembered for her performance as the daughter in "The Little Foxes," plays with tenderness the role of Gehrig's wife. Walter Brennan gives another fine characterization as the friendly sportswriter, who knew and understood the "man of iron." Many of Lou's former teammates including Bill Dickey, Babe Ruth and Mark Koenig, are seen playing themselves.

Morgan Organizes Early-Risers' Club

Dennis Morgan, who heads the large Warner Bros. cast for the Technicolor production of "The Desert Song," has formed a "Four-O'Clock Club."

The location is some 15 miles from Gallup, N. Mex., so members of the company must arise at 4 a. m. and be in the hotel coffee shop for breakfast by 4:30, in order to keep the day's schedule.

The member of the "Four O'Clock Club" most often late must buy each of the other 15 members a $25 war bond when the company returns to Hollywood.

She Started It

Olive Blakeney, Henry Aldrich's mother in "Henry Aldrich, Editor," was the actress who several months ago started the knitting vogue between scenes on the movie set.

Fan Sends Starlet Romantic Necklace

Marilyn Maxwell, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starlet, has just received a most unusual gift from a movie fan. It is a necklace made up of a double chain of wedding rings!

Sender is an anonymous admirer in Chicago, who saw Marilyn when she appeared there with Hollywood's recent Victory Caravan.

1. WHY IS A SECOND FRONT NECESSARY NOW?

Hitler and the Nazi High Command have always feared fighting on two fronts. They know that Germany was defeated in the last war and can be defeated in this war by being forced to fight on two fronts. A second land front in Europe would compel the Nazis to divide their forces; it would give the United Nations the initiative; by squeezing the body of the Axis octopus between the Red Army and an Anglo-American expeditionary force, the Axis tentacles in Libya, the Atlantic and Pacific would loose their grip. A Second Front can mean victory in 1942 if it strikes while Hitler's major forces are engaged in the East, while Western Europe is denuded of troops. But time works on Hitler's side. Today patrots in conquered countries sabotage production, heroically resist slave rule, prepare to rise in support of an invading army. But every day that passes Gestapo terror massacres more anti-fascists and organizes more production for the Hitler war machine. Every day that passes these potential allies grow weaker, hungrier. Delay means facing a Nazi army that grows stronger, not weaker. Delay means sacrificing lives of valued allies in conquered countries, lowering their morale, their faith in Allied intervention. Delay condemns Britain's and America's well-armed, well-trained troops to demoralizing inertia. A Second Front must be opened now not only to relieve the Soviet armies and people who have so magnificently borne the brunt of Hitler's attack for fourteen months and suffered 5,000,000 casualties. It must be opened to save the United Nations from catastrophe.

2. WHAT WOULD FAILURE TO OPEN A SECOND FRONT MEAN?

Unless a diversion is created, drawing German strategic reserves from the Eastern Front, the Red Army, now outnumbered 3 to 2 in men and much more than that in materiel, may be lost as an offensive power for a long time, even though it will fight on. Until now, Russian resistance has meant quiet nights in Britain, has protected the safety of New York and San Francisco. But if the Nazi summer offensive reaches its goal, the oil of the Caucasus will be used against us. By early Fall, the major part of the Nazi-Fascist troops and the Lufftwaffe will invade either Great Britain, or the Middle East and India—making a junction with the Japanese. The United States will then be threatened from all cardinal points but the North.

3. HOW WOULD A SECOND FRONT HELP THE U. S. A. AGAINST JAPAN?

Defeat Hitler and you crush the heart of the Axis. A successful Second Front will do just that. This would release the entire military, naval, air and industrial might of the United States and Great Britain against Japan. The embattled Chinese realize this and have been urging a Second Front in Europe. The Soviets would be able to increase vastly their shipments of arms to China. It will be far less costly to defeat Hitler by opening a Second Front in Europe than to expose our Soviet allies and ourselves to the danger of a Second Front in the Far East opened by the Japanese.

4. ISN'T A SECOND FRONT IN THE AIR SUFFICIENT?

No. Large scale bombing can help prepare for a Second Front but it cannot be a substitute for a land offensive. No major power can be beaten to its knees from the air. The epics of Britain, Malta, Leningrad, and Moscow prove it. Fascist planes rained bombs for years on ill-defended Madrid but aviation alone could not take the city. Even in Crete, air power was used to transport infantry, not to take its place. Look behind the arguments of such people as Seversky for only an aerial second front and you find the supporters of delay, because preparations would require many months. Major military decisions can be attained only by land troops supported, of course, by aviation.

5. ISN'T THE SECOND FRONT A PURELY MILITARY MATTER?

In announcing the Second Front as part of the official strategy of the United Nations, President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill have themselves made it a popular issue. The whereabouts and details of the Second Front must, of course, be settled by the High Command. But morale on the part of the people, the will to fight aggressively, readiness to make sacrifices for victory, are as essential as tanks and planes and military experts. Silence about the Second Front suggests timidity, a Maginot complex or worse. Hitler's friends are lond in their cries against a Second Front. Popular support for a Second Front assures our Commander-in-Chief that the people are prepared for the great sacrifices that will be demanded of them in undertaking a great offensive against the Axis.

6. WON'T A SECOND FRONT BE RISKY?

Of course. But not half as risky as NOT opening up a Second Front now. This summer America and Britain face in Western Europe a depleted Nazi army in the midst of subject peoples ready to revolt. Next year we would probably have to face the major part of Hitler's war machine. By acting now, our losses in ships, men and supplies will be far less costly than later.

The immediate aim of the Second Front would be to relieve pressure on the main front. If it is attempted with sufficient forces and determination, a major diversion will at the least be created, giving the Russians an indispensable breathing spell on the Eastern Front and a chance, in coordination with the Allied armies, to deal Hitler a knock-out blow. The Western Front operations, moreover, can develop from a major diversion to a major offensive, in assuring the speediest victory. It was an unsuccessful diversion by the Russians that saved the Allies at the Marne in the First World War. In coordinated operations the most important effects do not always show at the place where the diversionary blow is struck.

7. DO THE UNITED NATIONS HAVE THE SHIPS FOR A SECOND FRONT?

Emphatically "Yes." They have had enough ships to transport 950,000 men on the long voyage to the Middle East, to capture Madagascar, to take huge convoys to India and lost Singapore, to rescue a large army from Dunkirk, to send hundreds of thousands of American troops to the British Isles. And the Second Front in Europe involves no such vast distances, in fact, only the 20 or 25 miles across the English Channel in some places. The vessels are available, as trade union leaders in the maritime field have pointed out, if a priority is established for Second Front shipping. Lieut. Gen. Somervell said recently in London that "The United States is ready and able to send men and materiel on a large scale to a European battle front." Furthermore, the Second Front will be able to use effectively barges, rafts, ferries, and small boats of all kinds.

8. WHO IS DELAYING THE SECOND FRONT?

Hitler's agents and tools in the United States and England who are working for an Axis victory; die-hard appeasers who still think in terms of the original Munich plan of having Nazi Germany conquer Soviet Russia and expand to the East; muddle-headed or timorous citizens who honestly believe that a Second Front would be bad military strategy; the over-confident and over-complacent who feel that things are going well enough and why not let the Nazis get entangled in the vast spaces of Russia. All these help the fifth column to promote a "wait-and-see" attitude when "waiting" can only mean "seeing" defeat.

9. WHO SUPPORTS THE SECOND FRONT?

The Second Front is official policy for the United States, Britain, and the Soviet Union. Not only the people of all these countries support it, but the governments as well. The Molotov-Roosevelt-Churchill pacts announced June 11 covering a "full understanding on the urgent tasks of creating a Second Front in Europe in 1942" make that clear.

Harry Hopkins, White House spokesman, brought this message from President Roosevelt to a huge Madison Square Garden meeting in New York recently: "A Second Front—Yes! . . . Tell them we mean to give Russia aid on the field of battle."

Trade unionists back the call for a Western Front now. William Green, AFL President, declared: "I think it is imperative that the United Nations open a Second Front in Europe at the earliest possible moment." The United Steelworkers, of which CIO President Philip Murray is president, the United Auto Workers, the United Electrical and Radio Workers and many others have added their call for immediate action in Europe. Senator Pepper says the question is no longer HOW, but NOW and that nothing we can do is so dangerous as to do nothing. Vice President Wallace, Wendell Willkie and hosts of other leading Americans urge action now. Charlie Chaplin, the great movie actor, declared: "On the battlefield of Russia, democracy will live or die . . . Can we afford not to open a Second Front?"

In England, a powerful national movement, led by great trade unions, big newspapers, and such figures as Lord Beaverbrook, calls for an offensive in Europe now. Prime Minister Churchill said he welcomed this militant, aggressive spirit of the British nation.

The Soviet leaders, Red Army men and people are urging us to hurry and open the Second Front and American correspondents in Moscow are pleading with us not to let our allies down.

10. WHAT CAN YOU DO ABOUT A SECOND FRONT?

You can help in the urgent task of convincing every American of the immediate necessity for a Second Front, of showing President Roosevelt that all patriotic citizens stand firmly behind his pledge to our Soviet allies. We strengthen the hand of our government and weaken the appeasers by calling for a Second Front now. We unite the people of the United States with the peoples of the United Nations by calling for a Second Front now. We encourage the enslaved peoples in the conquered countries who want to know that "the Yanks are coming" by calling for a Second Front now.

THEREFORE, if you are serious about winning this war: Write to President Roosevelt. Persuade your trade union, church, club or other organizations to pass resolutions. Organize meetings—

WPB Spices Food Program With Chaos

When the Food Requirements Committee was set up in the Agriculture Department a good many people believed that a troublesome problem had been solved. The result, however, has been more chaos and confusion. Donald Nelson's War Production Board delegated authority to the committee to deal with the food problem. But before the committee's program can be placed in effect it must be approved step by step by WPB. Many steps have been proposed by the committee—weeks ago—but virtually none has been okayed by WPB. One of the most important is an expansion of the dehydrated food program.

The committee's recommendations at WPB are turned over to the food branch and that branch has taken it upon itself to investigate, revise and generally change everything proposed by the committee. Hence, delay, confusion and short tempers. It all boils down to the same old story; that is, the creation of a new agency makes for a worse madhouse when the authority isn't clearly defined. It should be clear that if WPB's food unit is going to do the job there is no need whatsoever for setting up the food committee. And, of course, the opposite applies. However, Agriculture was given the job because it already had the requisite organization and it was argued that WPB would only duplicate it if it were given the job. WPB wasn't given the job but it has duplicated Agriculture's committee nevertheless.

Col. Roy Lord, deputy director of the Board of Economic Warfare, is slated to be appointed chief of the new Office of Technical Development within the WPB. His job will be to make a study of all patents, processes, and inventions of a noncombatant nature. Congress recently approved funds for the office after its need had been brought out by Maury Maverick and other WPB officials. Donald Nelson is reported to have asked General Marshall to detail Colonel Lord to WPB. The Nation's scientists will be given a greater voice in the war program through the office. Colonel Lord has been working with Nelson on the Kaiser plan for cargo planes and he's credited with persuading the WPB chief to give cargo planes a trial.

A genial general tells this story on the War Department: In the recent campaign to rid the department of excess paperwork, someone down the line proposed that the department's files on an ancient Indian war be destroyed and the space be used for more important data. The suggestion went from one place to another and finally a considerable file was built up on it. A dozen or so officials approved the destruction of the yellowed papers and at last the final word came that the papers could be burned but this provision was added: "provided that copies are made of all papers destroyed."

Talking about excess paperwork, the Civil Service Commission has made a move that'll cut out an expected 40,000 paper actions on the change of status of employes. This will result in the saving of thousands of man hours and dollars. Hereafter, no agency need report to the commission personnel actions that cover: (1) automatic salary increases, (2) salary changes ordered by legislation (the 190,000 custodial pay raises recently ordered by Congress provide an example), (3) salary changes of less than $300, and (4) salary changes where quarters, subsistence and laundry are involved. It still will be necessary to report changes in grade.

Paperwork, duplication, red tape and other Federal problems are being dissected at an off-the-record conference sponsored by the Society for the Advancement of Management that opened yesterday at the Washington Hotel and which will close today. Many of the top administrative people in the Government are attending these sessions. In opening the conference, Lowell H. Hattery, vice president of the society, said that . . . "Government stations in our war production line are slowing down the total war process . . . the shakedown period is here and it is taking too long . . . too many conflicting objectives, too many hazy lines of authority, too many inefficient people, too little of the full employe cooperation necessary to place our gigantic Government plant in smooth operation."

Greenway Residents Say Owner Erred

Cafritz Explains Stand, Then He Is Questioned at Length At Rental Hearing

"This is a comedy of errors made by the landlord at the tenants' expense."

Such is the contention of the Greenway Tenants Association who fired its opening guns last night in the second session of the hearing to determine an equitable rental schedule for residents of the Greenway housing project at East Capitol Street and Minnesota Avenue Southeast.

The hearing, held in the auditorium of Anacostia High School, continued before a board of three examiners appointed by Robert F. Cogswell, Administrator for Rent Control, and an audience estimated at several hundred persons, mostly residents of the project.

Cafritz Asking Ceiling

The Greenway apartment project comprises 72 apartment buildings built in six groups with 11 families to each building. Morris Cafritz, president of the development, is asking for a ceiling of $53 a month for a one-bedroom apartment and $68 for a two-bedroom suite.

The action was started following the filing of petitions against 795 tenants by the corporation after several occupants requested the administrator's office to lower their rent.

At the opening of the session, Cafritz again took the stand and outlined his position. He said that at the time Greenway was constructed in March of this year, it was his sole desire to give Washington a low-cost housing group, but that he made his "mistake" when he underestimated building costs, which were, he claimed, considerably augmented by the installation of several conveniences for the use of the tenants.

Owner Is Questioned

Following the presentation of the Cafritz viewpoint, members of the tenants group were given the opportunity to question the property owner. C. W. Davis, spokesman for the association, led off by calling Cafritz' attention to several thefts of baby carriages, tires and automobile accessories from the vicinity of the project, to which Cafritz answered:

"I have not heard of it before."

At this point, Roger Whiteford, counsel for Greenway, Inc., wanted to know if Davis was inferring that watchmen employed on the property were not doing a good job. Then the matter was dropped.

Thereupon the proceedings turned to the subject of the conveniences installed for the tenants. In reply to a statement by Cafritz that coins in the washing machines did not pay for the upkeep of the appliances, tenants complained that the machinery was in such a state of disrepair that they could not be used.

Petitioner Quizzes Cafritz

Arlond T. Christensen, an original petitioner who spoke as an individual tenant, then queried Cafritz on the possibility that he was raising rents to take advantage of the unusual influx of Government workers, and the resultapt housing shortage. Cafritz retorted:

"That would be speculating. I consider it a civic duty to keep rents at the same level as previously. Reductions in rent through the use of free utilities such as gas and electricity have been given to over 900 tenants. The influx of Government workers has nothing to do with it."

The provisions of the Emergency Rent Act which froze rentals at their January 1, 1941, levels were brought up and shortly afterward friction developed between the tenants and the attorneys for the property owner when a spokesman for the Tenants Association said it did not want to base testimony on housing built after January 1, 1941. Thereupon the examining board held that as the rent administrator has set a ceiling on such property, then they would permit such rents to be used as a basis of comparison.

Davis, the tenants' attorney objected strenuously to the continuation of the argument by John J. Wilson, attorney for Cafritz, on the premise that Wilson had no right to argue a motion which the examiners had already ruled upon, in yesterday's testimony. Wilson retorted:

"I am going to keep talking till the examiner stops me, not you."

Examiners Rap for Order

The examiners rapped for order, and both men stopped the argument but remained standing.

The tenants then requested that no evidence should be received for comparison of housing accommodations completed after January 1, 1941, if no rent ceiling has been fixed in request of such accommodations. The examiners then took the matter under consideration and will render a decision in respect to this point at a later session.

The hearing was adjourned until this evening at 7 p. m.

ODT Lauds D.C., Arlington Transit Plan

Recommendations made by the Washington Regional Defense Transportation Committee for the improvement of bus service between the District and Arlington County were hailed last night by the Office of Defense Transportation as the first submitted by a regional committee anywhere in the United States.

The four-point program, submitted to the ODT and the District Public Utilities Commission on August 4, calls in brief for the termination of the Arnold bus line at Rosslyn except during rush hours, when 80 per cent of the vehicles would be rerouted by the Navy and Pentagon Buildings in Arlington.

"The suggestions of the Washington regional committee were cited by Joseph B. Eastman, ODT director, as an example of what might be accomplished by regional rather than purely local planning in the diversion of passengers to rails in an effort to save tire mileage," the ODT announced. "Eastman expressed the hope that other metropolitan areas might work out plans in their own communities directed toward the same result."

In recommending that the Arnold lines stop at Rosslyn except from 6:30 to 9:30 a. m. and 3:30 to 7 p. m., the regional committee hoped that some working arrangement could be made between the Arnold and the Capital Transit Co. that would allow passengers to transfer at that point without additional fare.

Officials of both companies have been studying the plan since it was submitted to them last week and hope to work out the details of such an arrangement in a conference with members of the committee this week.

Members of the regional defense transportation committee are Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Milton E. Diehl, representing the Virginia section of the metropolitan area, and Ben. G. Wilkinson, representing Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties.

The District PUC "acted within an hour" on the proposals when received at the District Building last week, PUC Chairman Gregory Hankin said. The proposals to have the Arnold buses proceed into the District during rush hours, and to route otherwise deadheads back by the military buildings in Arlington were ones that the PUC felt it could take immediate action upon, Hankin said.

The action taken was to supply the Arnold line with data on transportation habits of persons living along the bus line, and to offer the assistance of a PUC engineer. The agreement about the transfer of passengers during the nonrush hours from Arnold to Capital Transit vehicles at Rosslyn, Hankin said was a matter for the two interested parties to decide. He admitted that the Interstate Commerce Commission might have an interest in such an arrangement.

A slight relief in the District's mass transportation shortages was seen yesterday in the delivery of 69 streetcars to the Capital Transit Co. These are expected, however, to be the last vehicles obtainable until the end of temporary freezing of manufacture of buses and streetcars, orderd by the WPB last month. Months of delay are expected in the delivery of 375 buses and 100 more streetcars now on order by the transit company.

Victory Sidelights

Health Dept. to Make Survey On District Disease Immunity

Fearful of epidemics of typhoid, diphtheria or smallpox resulting from the overcrowded condition of Washington, the District Health Department and the civilian defense mobilization division yesterday planned a house to house canvass to determine the immunity status of the population.

At the conclusion of the fact-finding campaign, an immunization drive will be inaugurated. It is planned to set up clinics in all parts of the city so individuals can protect both their own and the community health by taking the necessary shots without incurring the expense of going to private physicians.

The Health Department reports that it has already taken steps to immunize its own personnel and has recommended similar precautions to various hospital staffs and to other departments of the District and Federal Governments. The Fire Department, for one, has stated that its employes are fully protected against smallpox and typhoid fever.

The greatest concern is about the possibility of a smallpox epidemic, a Health Department spokesman said. Not minimizing the dangers of wide-spread typhoid fever, he said the Health Department feels that the potentialities of smallpox in an over-crowded city are more serious and more difficult to control.

The house to house canvass to determine how many persons need vaccination or antitoxin shots will be done by volunteer workers of the Civilian Mobilization unit. It having been decided that the survey should start in an area where the influx of newcomers and the housing shortage are most acute, the Southeast section was tentatively selected as the first to be canvassed.

Mrs. Clive W. Swinney, Civilian Mobilization executive secretary, will be in charge of organizing the women to conduct the polling, which is expected to be initiated within a few weeks.

4450 Gas Ration Books Stolen; Stations Warned

Theft of 4450 gasoline ration books last week here was reported yesterday by the Office of Price Administration, it was announced last night.

The OPA revealed no details of the theft, merely saying that the books were "stolen in two separate burglaries of local board offices in Washington." The numbers of the books were made public by Irvin C. Rutter, chief enforcement attorney for OPA Region No. 2, and warned gasoline dealers that the stamps would not be valid. He asked dealers to report the license numbers of drivers trying to use any of the books. The thefts were reported from Jackson School, Thirtieth and R Streets Northwest, and the Petworth Library.

62% Rise in Marriage Licenses Proves Cupid Fast War Worker

Up to July 31, a total of 3317 couples applied for licenses, topping by more than 2500 the total of 5627 recorded on the same date in 1941.

At the present rate, the number of licenses issued by the end of this year will be double the 1940 total of 7727, it was estimated by Mrs. Maud R. Rynex, who is in charge of the bureau.

Col. Charles E. Stewart, clerk of District Court, commented that the rapid and consistent increase was not unexpected, in view of the flow of war workers into the city since the start of the war. The war itself is considered a factor.

In 1917, 5841 licenses were issued in the District, and in the following year the figure jumped to 6306.

The increases over the past four years were indicated in these statistics: 4833 licenses issued in 1938, 5908 in 1939, 7727 in 1940 and expected 14,000 for 1942.

August Rainfall Now 8.33 Inches; Far Over Normal

Continued intermittent rains yesterday swelled the total amount of rainfall for the first 12 days of August to 8.33 inches, or 6.32 inches over the normal figure, Weather Bureau officials reported.

While yesterday's rainfall was less than an inch—.98 inch—heavy downpours last week accounted for the heavy total. Normal rainfall in terms of months was estimated at 4.01 inches, less than one-half the amount which fell for the first 12 days this month.

Rainfall for the corresponding month last year was 1.92 inches, said officials, who predicted the showers probably would end by this morning.

Yesterday's temperature high of 83 degrees was reached at 4:45 p. m. and fell to 72 degrees by 11 p. m.

Mason's Fiasco Remark Roils Chief Warden

Repercussions from the confusion of Monday's unannounced blackout continued yesterday, as the District Commissioners and civilian defense officials spent the afternoon trying to draft adequate blackout regulations, and Chief Air Raid Warden William J. Mileham publicly denounced Commissioner Guy Mason's sharp criticism of the Monday test.

Mason said last night that the comprehensive new regulations should be completed today. (Acting Defense Co-ordinator Charles W. Kutz had said on Tuesday that it should take only 24 hours to revise them.) While no details of the new regulations were given out, there was assurance that daytime tests would be covered and that official signals would be legally designated.

More than 100 violators of the Monday blackout were allowed to go free because the Corporation Counsel's office refused to prosecute on grounds that the warning of a three-minute fluctuating blast, in use for the past six months, had never been officially made a part of the regulations.

Although John Russell Young, as United States defense coordinator for the District, issued an official order on April 11 designating the continued blast as the air-raid alarm signal, and rescinding "all previous instructions on this subject, particularly Instruction No. 7, dated December 12, 1941," nevertheless Young failed to issue such an order as President of the Board of Commissioners.

Since the District regulations were based on the December 12 order, which called for a series of five short blasts, the corporation counsel has held that no one was given sufficient warning on Monday, and therefore there could be no prosecutions. In the air-raid tests held between April 11 and last Monday, only the last one failed to carry an official order specifying the new signal, which was given as reason why prosecutions were allowed for previous ones.

This legal hair-splitting has been a cause of resentment among air-raid wardens, said Mileham, who took exception to Mason's description of the Monday test as a "fiasco."

"It's very discouraging for the wardens to get up and go out to work in the rain, then be told by the Commissioners that the results are a disgrace and that because of official confusion none of the violators can be prosecuted," Mileham said.

Addressing the Lions Club at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday, Mileham stated that he thought it was very poor policy for Mason to make "such a to-do about Monday's test." Although admitting himself that he was disappointed in the results of the test, he said that he considered Mason's use of the word "fiasco" was "very ill-chosen, to say the least."

Dr. Hastings Is Installed As Pastor Here

A minister can become one of two things to his congregation—a good shepherd or a pet lamb, Dr. F. W. Burnham, pastor of the Seventh Street Christian Church in Richmond, said last night at the installation of Dr. James Warren Hastings as pastor of National City Christian Church, Fourteenth Street at Thomas Circle Northwest.

"Don't make your minister a pet lamb," warned Dr. Burnham, who delivered the charge to the pastor. The minister's relation to his church should be as a father to his family or a shepherd to his flock, he went on.

Misting rains with intermittent cloudbursts failed to keep the congregation of the Nation's outstanding Disciples of Christ Church from attending the ceremony, which had drawn outstanding officials of the denomination from far points of the country.

Ten shrines of the Disciples Church from the oldest meeting house in Caneridge, Ky., built in 1791, to the latest in point of time, the National City Church, which was dedicated in 1930, were named by Dr. Robert M. Hopkins, president of the United Christian Missionary Society, who delivered the sermon.

Dr. William Howard Pinkerton, interim minister at National City Church since the resignation of Dr. R. H. Miller in November, presided. Warning against "sticking our heads in the sand" after this war was voiced by John Rogers, member of the National City Christian Church Corporation of Tulsa, Okla. "We cannot live isolated from the world if we fulfill our duties as Christian men and women, he said.

Lieut. Col. Walter B. Zimmerman, chaplain, read the Scripture lesson, and the prayer of dedication was by the Rev. Walter M. Haushalter of the Christian Temple, Baltimore.

D. C. Heads Ask Tax Law Be Redefined

Call for Changes In Exemption Rules As Senate Unit Begins Hearings

The District Commissioners joined yesterday in urging a redefinition of the city's tax exemption laws, as the Senate District Committee commenced a series of hearings on the bill to restore the tax exempt status of various Washington charitable, educational and religious institutions.

Municipal officials gave principal testimony at the opening session, which was attended by so large a gathering of witnesses that most of the time was spent in working out a schedule of four additional meetings on the measure.

Finally set by Chairman McCarran, sponsor of the bill, were all-day sessions Friday, at which representatives of universities, scientific groups and social agencies will testify; Saturday morning, to be attended by hospital representatives; all-day Monday, for religious and charitable groups, and Tuesday morning for miscellaneous educational-scientific organizations.

The opinion of the Commissioners on the pending bill given in a statement by Corporation Counsel Richmond Keech, asserted that "the exemption statutes should be materially changed if equity is to be done to many legitimate charities and to the taxpayers of the District."

"The exemption statutes are too strict in some instances," Keech declared, "susceptible of far too liberal interpretation in other respects, and in need of reclassification if they are to be fairly and reasonably administered."

Stressing the fact that the readjustment must be made equitable to the taxpayer, Keech pointed out that more than 5 per cent of the city's assessed property value is made up of tax-exempt property owned by institutions or individuals, totaling upward of $11,700,000.

Also testifying yesterday was Edmund D. Campbell, chairman of a special Bar Association committee appointed to study the legislation. Campbell endorsed the bill in general, though suggesting several technical changes.

He pointed out that the law must be made broad enough to include deserving local institutions, but narrow enough to exclude many "quasi" organizations, natoinal in character, but maintaining District headquarters.

Only representative of an affected institution to testify yesterday was Edward Rosenblum, of the Jewish Community Center. He said that the center had always been tax exempt until replaced on the rolls under the Commissioners' recent order.

Terming the organization "educational and semi-religious" in character, operating on a non-sectarian basis, he asked that the proposed bill be changed to spell out exemption for institutions aimed at "moral, mental and physical improvement."

Russians Offered Rubber Patents Long Ago

IT WILL PROBABLY BE DENIED, but last February the Soviet government offered the United States all its patents, information and technical experience in making synthetic rubber—and now, six months later, still has received no reply.

PEARSON

This was shortly before the fall of the Dutch East Indies, but when its fall appeared imminent.

Russia, realizing the danger to our rubber sources, and being then the biggest synthetic rubber producer in the world, offered its information to the United States. The Soviet uses an alcohol process for synthetic rubber, which it developed, and published in its trade journal, even before Germany.

However, the Rubber Reserve decided to use a petroleum base for rubber instead of alcohol. It clung to that thesis until recently when Congress raised such a terrific furor over discrimination against Midwest grain and contended that Jesse Jones was favoring the big oil companies of Texas.

NOTE: The Russians asked nothing in return for their synthetic rubber information, but, even so, got no reply.

Solomon Islands Strategy

WHAT THE NAVY WAS UP AGAINST in the Battle of the Solomon Islands was the little-known fact that the Japs were fortifying the islands at break-neck speed. Working night and day the Japs have been building runways, gasoline tanks, anti-aircraft installations.

Since the Solomons extend down near the supply route between Hawaii and Australia, they have been a direct menace to U. S. shipping and the trans-Pacific air line. Therefore, it was up to the Navy to move before the Japs became too deeply entrenched. Moreover, Japanese activities in the Solomon Islands were typical of their zeal in other south Pacific islands, in many of which they have been spending 24 hours a day with bulldozers and tractors leveling runways and fortifying harbors. All of this was going on during the lull after the Battle of Midway and during the monsoon rains in India.

Some strategists figure that if the Japs are given one full year to fortify the south Pacific islands, it would take three or four years to dislodge them. That is why the attack on the Solomon Islands was partly a race against time.

Baseball Diplomat

"PROF." MOE BERG, one-time big league baseball catcher, is going to Latin America as an extraordinary good-will ambassador. His diplomatic mission is almost without parallel in the annals of diplomacy.

BERG

The big ball player is being sent by the Rockefeller office to improve relations between American troops and Latin-American citizenry wherever U. S. soldiers are stationed below the Rio Grande. He will also try to boost morale among U. S. troops.

Moe Berg is a Princeton graduate, was captain and shortstop on the Tigers' baseball team, also learned Spanish and Portuguese. Later, he went to the Brooklyn Dodgers, then to the Chicago White Sox, the Cleveland Indians and landed with the Washington Senators in time to help win the 1933 pennant. Then for six years he caught for the Boston Red Sox, and twice went to Japan with Connie Mack's all-star team.

This week, Moe will leave for Panama, where he will mingle with U. S. troops, then on to Ecuador, Venezuela and Brazil, and to every Latin American country where our soldiers are stationed. He will have little to do with American embassies, will wear no cutaway or white spats, but is expected to do more for understanding among the common people than some of the top-hat gentry.

Capital Chaff

The Federal Works Administration may fold up or be transferred back to its first boss, PWAdministrator Ickes. Out of 100 million dollars granted to it for this year, only 36 million dollars have been spent, and of this five million dollars went for administration. Friends are insistent that Bob Patterson not leave his job as Undersecretary of War to run as a compromise candidate for Governor of New York . . . Gen. Alexander Surles, in charge of the Army's press relations, will have all other branches of War Department news brought under his jurisdiction . . . Col. Henry Leonard, Republican national committeeman from Colorado, is trying to get back into the Marine Corps despite loss of an arm in the Boxer Rebellion. Leonard was attorney for the late Gen. Smedley Butler when he faced court martial for criticizing Mussolini, and may be defense counsel for Admiral Kimmel.

WPBoss Haircut

WPBOSS DONALD NELSON is on the job at 8 a. m. sharp every day, checks out around 7:30 p. m., seldom takes more than 10 minutes for an office lunch of fruit salad and a glass of milk. But he doesn't complain.

He hasn't had a vacation since he came to Washington more than two years ago from a relatively cushy job as executive vice president of Sears, Roebuck & Co. at a salary far in excess of the $9000 a year he now receives. But he doesn't complain about that either.

He is constantly being put in "the middle" of squabbles involving policy, including the bitter one now raging among Price Administrator Leon Henderson, the War Board and other agencies over proposals to freeze wages, But that is another thing he doesn't complain about.

"The worst thing," he told a friend, "is that I'm seldom able to get a haircut. I don't have time to get one before I go to work in the morning, and the barber shops are closed when I'm through at night.

New Government Girls' Hotel—Home of 1942-Style Miss Washington

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

If you don't think that a new type of Government girl is emerging from this war effort, have a look at the residents of the newly constructed Meridian Hill Hotel at Sixteenth and Euclid Streets Northwest, where only warworkers reside.

Miss Washington, 1942 style, is a far cry from the self-centered playgirl of yesteryear. As typified at Meridian Hill, she is an industrious young woman with a penchant for playing—but only when it doesn't interfere with arising at 6:30 a. m.

The hotel, financed through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was criticized early in its career for catering to women in higher income brackets.

Today, rates have been lowered from the original $7-$9.50 weekly to $6.50-$8.75, and the Meridian Hill management points out that 82 per cent of its residents make from $1260 to $1800 yearly, with only 5 per cent earning more than $2400.

Undoubtedly Government girls always have watched their pennies and done much for themselves, but working in wartime Washington has made this design for living a necessity for thousands more young women than ever before.

Meridian Hill residents do their own laundry in tubs designed for their use, and just as often shampoo their own hair instead of visiting the swank beauty salon provided for them.

FORDYCE E. MINNICK,
Manager of Meridian Hill

Many of them plan their budgets so skillfully that a major problem is presented by the prospect of paying 25 cents for lunch instead of the 20, or in buying a 44-cent movie ticket instead of going to a cheaper matinee.

Today's warworker also is increasingly considerate of her weary neighbor, says Assistant Manager Marian Mills of the hotel staff.

"You should walk down these corridors at night," she observed yesterday. "There isn't a sound; the girls even keep their radios tuned low because next door neighbors may be trying to sleep. But at 6:30 a. m. alarm clocks blast forth on every floor because most of the girls have to be out early for these war jobs."

For recreation, girls do not have to leave the building. They can swim in the long, attractive pool in the basement; play bridge in two living rooms on the ground floor; absorb vitamin D on the spacious sundeck, or loll on the veranda on the Euclid Street side of the building.

But if you want to phone, there's a real problem. Priorities are needed for new telephones and it is necessary to wait in line to use one of the only two phones, which are in the lobby.

The Ambassador Wins Hambletonian

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Philadelphia, Aug. 12.—The Yankees, always reluctant to give the customers anything except a straight diet of baseball, albeit the best kind of baseball, have finally aroused themselves to the point of putting on a show. On August 23, date of a Yankee Stadium double-header with the Nats, the Yankees will stage a whopping afternoon for the benefit of Army-Navy relief.

POVICH

Hitherto the Yanks have been content to depend on their kind of baseball to draw the customers. They never needled their attractions with hippodrome or monkey shines or circus stuff a la Larry MacPhail or Clark Griffith, but on the afternoon of August 23, a Sunday, the Yanks are going to junk past policy. The Yanks, you see, are jealously trying to surpass the gate receipts turned over to the War relief fund by the recent Giants-Dodgers game.

And so the Yankees have scheduled a side show with the Nats before their August 23 double-header. They will trot out Babe Ruth in his old Yankee uniform, for exhibition purposes. And they have asked Bucky Harris to bring Walter Johnson along in his old Washington uniform. Ruth and Johnson will be the judges of a carnival of field events before the game.

General Manager Ed Barrow of the Yankees has challenged George Case to run against several Yankee speed boys in a test around the bases and on the straight away. Harris has agreed to match some of his athletes against the Yankees in a test of throwing for accuracy. Long-distance throwing is out, because of the fear that some athlete will hurt his arm. But there will be fungo hitting for distance by the big men of the two clubs.

The feature of the pre-game show will be, of course, the Yankees' challenge to the speed of George Case. Barrow, in his letter to Harris, admits that he has great doubt that any of his Yankees can outrun Case, either around the bases or on the straight away, but he adds "I think we can make it close."

Manager Joe McCarthy, who will pick the Yankee runners to oppose Case, will undoubtedly name three or four for the test. Charley Keller, Phil Rizzuto, Joe Gordon and Joe DiMaggio will be his best bets. On the Washington club, Case's pals think it won't be close. The fleet Trenton lad could spot any of the Yankees 10 yards at a 100 and outrun 'em, they think.

Four years ago when Case was scheduled to run Ben Chapman at 100 yards in a race that never came off because of an injury to Chapman, Georgetown's track coach, Hap Hardell, was putting Case through a series of prep sprints. Case was running the 100 yards on the Griffith Stadium turf, mind you, in baseball shoes in 10 seconds.

"Case had a chance to be the greatest sprinter who ever lived," said Hardell during those trials.

"I don't believe anybody else could make that time on the turf in baseball shoes. On a track, in spikes, Case would be a sureshot to run the 100 in 9.4 seconds.

Any one of the four Yankee speedsters might beat Case away from the plate at the start of any race, but within 15 yards he'll be running the fastest. The man among the Yankees who might make it closest for him, the Nats think, is Keller, who has more sustained speed. Little Rizzuto is a fast breaker, but his short legs make his speed look deceptive. Actually he does not move as fast as he appears. Big DiMaggio is the reverse. He glides with a long stride that makes him appear slower than his actual speed.

For the four-man relay race against the Yankee quartet Harris has already selected his team. Case will be a member, of course, but there is something of a surprise in the fact that Ellis Clary is not one of Harris' choices.

"Al Evans may be the second fastest man on our club," says Harris. "It's either he or Johnny Sullivan. But my fourth man will surprise you. He's a pitcher, and he can fly. He's Walter Masterson. I think a team of Case, Evans, Sullivan and Masterson can lick any four men the Yankees can dig up."

The fellow Harris would have liked to have had on his Washington relay team is another pitcher who is no longer with the club. "He's Bill Kennedy," who went back to Chattanooga. "Most of his actions when he was pitching made him look like the laziest man on the club. But he could move whenever he hit the ball. I guess he's the fastest running pitcher I ever saw in my life."

The Yankees will be the favorites to beat the Nats in the fungo-hitting contest, because of the presence of Big Red Ruffing, one of the top fungo men in the league. Who'll oppose Ruffing? Harris has only one choice, and will be praying that he connects solidly with at least one ball. Big Buck Newsom, a fair hand at riding a fungo, will be the Nats' lone hope against Ruffing.

69-Year-Old White Drives Victor Home

Colby Hanover, the Favorite, Flops; New Trotting Champ Takes Last 2 Heats

By the Associated Press

Gashen, N. Y., Aug 12—Bill Strang, the Brooklyn storage and trucking man who spent a small fortune seeking a Hambletonian winner, reached his objective today when The Ambassador led ten other 3-year-old trotters home in the rich Buggy Whip Derby at Good Time Park

With 69-year-old Ben White handling the reins for his third triumph in the rich stake, The Ambassador won the second and third heats after Pay Up, owned by Robert Horace Johnston of Charlotte, N. C., had taken the first brush around the three-sided track.

With the victory went revenge for the decision hung on Strang's His Excellency last year by Johnston's Bill Gallon. His Excellency won one heat of the 1941 race, but yielded to Bill Gallon in the other two tests. Today, The Ambassador, half-brother to His Excellency, finished fifth in the first heat as Pay Up trotted the mile in 2:06, to win in a photo finish.

Colby Hanover Flops

The Ambassador won the second mile in the same time. Seven Up lightly regarded trotter owned by Lieut. Ebby Gerry of the United States Army Air Corps, took runner-up honors with Pay Up in the picture for third money. But White left nothing for argument in the third heat as the Ambassador pulled away to win in 2:04.

Colby Hanover was the biggest flop to the crowd, estimated at 12,000 to 15,000. The champ 2-year-old of 1941 who had trotted a mile in 2:03 this year was made the odds-on favorite for the first two heats and heavily supported in the third. But he never was a factor, finishing eighth, eleventh and tenth.

In taking down $20,489.91, the winner's share of the $38,954.38 purse, the Ambassador justified the confidence placed in him when Strang took him out of the 1940 Walnut Hall yearling sales for $5000. He was lame last year and didn't start and in his only previous effort this season won one heat at Old Orchard Beach, Me. For Strang the seventh try was a success although all of his six other Hambletonian starters finished in the money.

With Colby failing his supporters, the long-shot players cashed in on every heat. Pay Up paid $23.90 in winning the first dash; a $2 ticket on The Ambassador in the second returned $68.20 and one on him in the third was worth $8.40.

All Rank Outsiders

Even the second and third horses, for the most part, were rank outsiders. Scotland's Comet, owned by Thomas Thomas of Cleveland finished second to Pay Up in the first and returned $32.40 and $16.10 to place and show, respectively, while George L. Hempt's Follow Me of Camp Hill, Pa., showed a $16.20 mutuel.

The longest odds were $79.10, returned by Seven Up for finishing second in The Ambassador's first triumph.

The final standings gave Pay Up second money; Scotland's Comet, third; Seven Up, fourth; Follow Me, fifth, and Mabel Hanover, sixth.

Game-Winning Sock Breaks Up Power Hitting Duel; Dom DiMaggio Homers

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 12.—With the score tied, the bases loaded and one man out in the last half of the ninth inning, Charlie Keller smashed his eighteenth home run of the season into the right-center field bleachers, 420 feet away, to give the New York Yankees an 8-4 triumph over the Boston Red Sox today.

The game-winning blow broke up a duel of power hitting and provided Fordham Hank Borowy with his eleventh pitching victory of the season compared with only two losses, although the Red Sox rapped him for 13 blows, including two doubles, two triples and a homer.

The Yankees increased their American League lead to 13 games, but the Red Sox also found their second-place margin boosted to two games over the Cleveland Indians, who dropped a pair to the Detroit Tigers.

Lefty Ken Chase started for the Bosox and yielded two runs in the opening frame, the first on a homer by lead-off man Buddy Hassett, his fifth of the year. Red Rolfe walked, stole second, and scored the second run on Joe DiMaggio's single.

Sox Tie It in Third

The Sox tied it up in the third on a single by Dom DiMaggio, one of his three hits in the game; a triple by Johnny Pesky and a single by Ted Williams. Dom DiMaggio sent Boston ahead in the fourth with his twelfth homer and the Red Sox tallied again in the fifth, when Tony Lupien tripled and came in on an infield out.

Joe Gordon put the Yanks back in the game in the sixth, spanking a two-run homer that drove Chase to the showers and brought in Mike Ryba. It was Gordon's eleventh four-bagger and it followed a pass to Joe DiMaggio.

Ryba got through the next two innings without trouble, but Tommy Henrich singled with one away in the ninth and DiMaggio beat out an infield hit. Gordon also beat out an infield roller, loading the bases and setting the stage for Keller's timely wallop.

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 12.—The St. Louis Cardinals today took both ends of a double-header, from the Chicago Cubs 9 to 4 and 8 to 3 before a crowd of 14,127.

Johnny Beazley turned in his thirteenth victory of the season in the opener. He gave the Cubs 11 hits while his teammates made a similar number off Bill Lee and Hiram Bithron. Lee suffered his eleventh loss of the season.

In the second game Harry Gumbert chalked up his sixth victory of the season when he held the Cubs to eight hits while the Cardinals slammed Bill Fleming, Dick Errickson and Tot Pressnell for 13 hits. One of the Cardinals' 13 hits was Enos Slaughter's eleventh home run of the year.

Marines Commission Third Hanley Brother

Chicago, Aug. 12 (INS).—Lee R. Hanley, one of football's three Hanley brothers and a former grid star at Northwestern University, tonight was on the way to Quantico, Va., a first lieutenant in the Marines.

The others are Maj. Dick Hanley, former Northwestern football coach and now stationed at Navy Pier in Chicago, and Maj. Pat Hanley, former Boston College coach.

Mrs. Mann's Rally Beats Miss Tainter

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Mrs. Russell Mann of Omaha, Nebr., the defending champion, fought off a head cold and the stiff challenge of Georgia Tainter of Fargo, N. Dak., today to win her second round match in the Women's Western Amateur Golf Tournament at Sunset Ridge.

Mrs. Mann pulled away on the final two holes to win 2 up, and advance to tomorrow's quarter-final play.

Georgie Parks Added to Ring Card Monday

George Parks, local Negro heavyweight who recently knocked out Gus Mirman and Al Reiss in spectacular fashion, was signed yesterday to replace Pat Comiskey on Monday night's boxing show at Griffith Stadium.

Parks has been booked against Mike O'Dowd, popular New York club fighter, in a special ten-rounder support of the ten-round main event bringing together Lee Savold and Tony Musto.

O'Dowd is one of the busiest, young heavyweights around New York and is considered capable of demanding Parks' best, and possibly of turning in an upset. This will be his first test out of a New York ring in months, and experienced boxing men maintain he is capable of coming up with a knockout.

'Skins Name Backs to Open First Game

By the Associated Press

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 12.—Ray Flaherty, coach of the Washington Redskins of the National Pro Football League, today announced the Easterners' starting backfield for the second annual East-West intrasquad game here August 23.

Flaherty listed Slingin' Sammy Baugh and Wilbur Moore as halfbacks, Andy Farkas at fullback and Marvin Whited at quarterback.

The East-West game will sharpen the Redskins for their clash with Maj. Wallace Wade's Western All-Army team in the Los Angeles Coliseum August 30.

Sal Mena, former University of Southern California end now employed at a local aircraft plant, joined the Redskin squad today but probably will take part only in the East-West contest.

No More Twilight Games for Tribe Under Same Rules

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 12.—Roger Peckinpaugh, Cleveland Indians vice president, asserted today that last night's twilight game with Detroit which ended in a tie because of darkness was "our last experiment" with late daylight starting hours.

"Never again so long as I have any connection with this club will we start a game in twilight unless we know we can finish it," Peckinpaugh said. "That means, unless we know we can turn on the lights if necessary. Everyone in the stands would rather have seen us finish the first game than start the second game, but we had no choice and of course, neither did the umpires."

Mrs. Stokes Given Scare, Wins, 1 Up

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes is still in the running for grand slam honors of women's golf in this section but for a while yesterday Baltimore's Gladys Greiner had the biggest upset of the season in the making in the Middle Atlantic championship at Congressional Club.

Mrs. Stokes, already the District and Maryland titlist and anxious to add the sectional crown for a first-time sweep of the three championships, finally defeated Miss Greiner, 1 up, after trailing by two holes with six to play.

Miss Greiner, never a tournament winner in this section but with a number of upsets to her credit in several years' play, beat Mrs. Stokes two years ago at Chevy Chase and until the latter won three holes in a row in the late stages of the back nine yesterday it looked as though the Baltimorean would repeat.

Mrs. Pray Wins

A Manor clubmate, Mrs. L. G. Pray, joined Mrs. Stokes in the semifinals with a 1-up victory over the tournament medalist, Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg of Baltimore C. C. After watching a two-hole lead vanish into a one-hole deficit on the back nine, Mrs. Pray won the last two holes and the match. The semifinal berth was decided on the eighteenth green where Mrs. Pray calmly dropped a 6-foot putt for a par 4 and then watched Mrs. Schulderberg miss a tricky 3-footer, which would have sent the match to the nineteenth hole if she had made it.

Mrs. Leo Walper of Indian Spring and Mrs. George Owens, Petersburg, Va., completed the four survivors, as each won handily. Mrs. Walper, medalist and semifinalist in the District, had too many strokes for Congressional's newcomer from Boston, Mrs. Joseph Welch, and won, 7 and 6. Mrs. Owens caught Tuesday's upset winner, Elinor Finckel, in a natural letdown after her surprise victory over Mrs. Maurice Glick, and won, 5 and 4.

Today it will be Mrs. Walper and Mrs. Pray in an upper bracket semifinal, while in the other match Mrs. Stokes will match shots with the last of the out of town contestants, Mrs. Owens. The finals will be played tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Miss Greiner walked off the ninth green with a 2 up advantage over Mrs. Stokes, which caused eyebrow lifting among the onlookers. Mrs. Stokes lost one hole on the front nine when her ball buried in the turf and she was forced to concede the hole, plus another to a dead stymie.

Chisox's Late Rally Fails as Browns Win

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 12.—Two Brownie relief pitchers were necessary in the ninth inning today to quell a sudden outburst by the Chicago White Sox and assure Elden Auker of his thirteenth victory of the season as the Sox were defeated, 6 to 3.

Until the ninth the veteran submarine tosser had a shutout and had allowed only five hits. Then he walked Sammy West and Luke Appling. Taft Wright's single—his third straight hit—sent West over the plate and Auker to the dressing room.

Friez Ostermueller, a left hander, took over but lasted only one-third of an inning. George Caster finished. Joe Kuhel's forceout of Wright scored Appling with the second run. Kuhel reached second on a passed ball, gained third on Bob Kennedy's single and tallied as Tom Turner forced Kennedy.

St. Louis scored enough to win in the fourth inning. Don Kolloway's boot of George McQuinn's grounder started the rally and four singles and a walk drove in four runs.

Brooklyn's French Blanks Phillies, 1-0

Lefty Wins 12th of Season, Third Shutout; Rube Melton Walks in Winning Run in 9th

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 12.—Left Larry French, the National League's leading pitcher, blanked the Philadelphia Phils on four hits to hang up his twelfth victory against only one defeat today as the Brooklyn Dodgers squeezed out a 1-0 decision.

The triumph was something of a gift from French's opponent, Rube Melton, who matched the Brooklyn southpaw's four-hit performance but forced in the winning run in the ninth inning when he walked Dolph Camilli with the bases loaded.

Melton held the Dodgers to two blows over the first eight innings. Arky Vaughan opened the home half of the ninth with a single down the first base line and went to second as Pete Reiser beat out a bunt on an attempted sacrifice.

After Joe Medwick sacrificed both runners up a notch, Melton walked Dixie Walker purposely, to fill the bags. Then he couldn't find the plate against Camilli and the winning run came home, to end the game with only one out. It was the thirteenth loss for Melton against seven wins.

The Dodgers threatened in the third frame, when Billy Herman led off with a double, but Melton retired the next three men in order. In the sixth, Peewee Reese singled with one out and stole second before Vaughan drew a pass, but Melton fanned Pete Reiser and forced Medwick to ground out.

The Phils missed their best chance in the second inning when Danny Litwhiler opened with a double and Nick Etten walked. But with two out, Mickey Livingston singled to center and Reiser threw Litwhiler out at the plate.

The only other blows off French were a one-baser by Merrill May in the fifth and an infield single by Danny Murtaugh in the final frame.

It was the third shutout of the season for French, who leads all active National League pitchers in the whitewashing department with 39 for his career.

Edward Rack Slips, But Keeps Typo Golf Lead

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 12.—A third-round 78—his poorest score to date in the Union Printcraft International Golf Association's 72-hole championships—was good enough today to maintain the seven-stroke lead of Edward Rack, McKeesport, Pa.

Rack's 54-hole total was 222, compared to a total of 229 for Joe Sommers of Detroit. Sommers' one-over-par 72, second low round of the tournament, boosted him into second place.

Carl Daniels of Ferndale, Mich., runner-up after 36 holes, added an 82 to his 151 for a 233-stroke total and dropped behind Sommers and E. A. Merkle of Washington. Merkle fired a 157—75—232 to advance into third place.

Early's Arm Brings Praise From Harris, Teammates

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 12.—Jake the Plumber they used to call him when Rookie Jake Early was an unorganized clown in his mask and chest protector at the Nats' training camps a few years ago and they laughed when he sat down to catch.

They think he's sort of wonderful now. The Nats will argue violently with anybody that there's isn't a better-throwing catcher in the league.

The good right arm that hangs from Early's shoulder has been plain poison to base runners this season, and Manager Bucky Harris credits Early's throwing with no inconsiderable part in the Nats' recent triumphs.

"I used to be amazed at Early's beautiful throwing," recites Harris, "but I am now taking it for granted. He is showing me a better throwing arm than I've ever seen in my 24 years in the American League. What a great help Jake has turned out to be."

The base runners around the league are beginning to see eye-to-eye with Harris, or if not then they are all astigmatic. They have learned that they can take fewer liberties with Early's throwing arm than any other catcher's.

He probably gave his greatest exhibition the other night in Griffith Stadium against the Red Sox. From his haunches he snapped a throw to

Governor, 6000 Fans Witness Card

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 12.—W. S. Sprague's Star Canter, a super mud-runner, didn't give the Cumberland Day crowd of 6000 anything to enthuse over when he outran five opponents over the mile and one-sixteenth route to capture the City of Cumberland Purse by ten lengths.

The all-day rain, not only played havoc with the attendance, but cut deeply into the wagering. However, it turned the racing strip fetlock deep in slop, which Star Canter loved from the moment the "off bell" rang until he was safely across the payoff line. Those fans knowing his fondness for the soft going collected $17.20. Place money went to Mrs. M. V. Jenkins' Schley Al, while Galt Davis' Ginobi, the public choice, was third.

Frank Spenski's Ginger Man opened the sport by leading six other 2-year-olds over the 4½-furlong route. His score was followed by that of Mrs. G. A. Cook's United Force. Fans taking the 7-1 daily double combination on the first two winners collected $21.10.

Selections at Cumberland

Dear Al:

The Harry A. Manley Handicap being run today in honor of the genial president of the Cumberland Fair Association, may not be America's outstanding horse race, but it carries a trophy that is as ancient as any contested for in Uncle Sam's domain. It's a solid silver wine cooler with cover. Once belonged in the collection of the late King George III of England from 1780 to 1820. Cost the men who run this meeting $1000, but it's worth it, as it goes in a race named for the man who has done the most for racing in this thriving city. The trophy which is being contested for the seventh time today, must be won three times by the same owner before it becomes their outright property. Official entries published elsewhere in this paper attest to the caliber of the field that will fight it out over the 6½ furlongs of the Manley.

That fine sportsman and prince of good fellows, Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, is motoring up from Monumental City to make the presentation, following the running of the Manley. Jackson is solidly for racing, which is one reason why Maryland's sport is so popular.

Delving through the charts on the season's races we find that Buddy Root, who is topping the jockeys here, won 65 races prior to yesterday. Root's record follows: 2 at Bowie, 37 at Charles Town, 9 each at Hagerstown, Bel Air, and here. Dan Chamblin, who hails from Ole Virginny and who is setting the pace for the trainers here, has saddled 37 winners this year. Chamblin's score follows; 21 at Charles Town, 5 each at Hagerstown and Bel Air, and 6 here.

If you ever visited a Maryland press coop you know Eddie (Butch) McCann. The Baltimorean today joined up with Uncle Sam's Navy, which he also served in World War I. Henry Bittner, an arrival from Baltimore, brought the glad tidings tht Gale D. (Gaby) Haugh, veteran Monumental City turf writer, has left the South Baltimore General Hospital and is well on the road to recovery. BILL.

First race—ALLENTOWN appeared in top form in winning Tuesday's opener; therefore I am taking this plater right back. EYE OPENER and EXARCH figure as named.

Second race—MARANDAN rates the day's best bet if able to get postward. RANDLE'S QUEEN should furnish the contention. FAIR FLAME could handle the others.

Third race—ROYAL FLEET needs only a hustling ride in order to handle these youngsters. The Rogers entry will have ELIZABETH K to down for the runner-up money.

Fourth race—ANYWAY seems slightly best in an affair of this kind. ROMAN BOY may outlast WESTING for the place award.

Fifth race—WEATHERITES last was a beaut. A repeat would enable this one to trim CALORY for the purse. WALTER HAIGHT is at tops, which means he should be no worse than third.

Sixth race—It figures very close in a race of this kind between WORTHOWNING and JAMES PAL, but I am stringing along with the first named. MOROCCO D rates as named.

Seventh race—If TANTRUM is ever going to win a race it should be here. CORORA and PANDORAMINT may divide the rest of the spoils.

Eighth race—IDLE NIGHT could handle these platers if intelligently ridden. MATCH POINT will likely be second. LEONARDTOWN has a chance to head the others.

Best bet—Marandan.

Heinbaugh's Tainted Run Decides Tilt

Score Comes n 9th; Silverman Goes All Way for Colonials; Tars' Leahy Shelled

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 12.—An unearned run by George Washington's Charlie Heinbaugh in the last of the ninth inning defeated Navy 5 to 4, today in a hard-fought Maryland-District of Columbia League baseball game.

The Tars collected 11 hits off Aaron Silverman, who went the distance for the Colonials, but Navy's inability to hit in the pinches cost it several opportunities to win.

Bill Leahy, Paul Burdett, Lefty Reinstra and Dan Casey twirled for Navy, the Colonials bagging all their hits off Leahy.

George Washington took the lead with an unearned second inning run but George Watson's double with Middies Warren McNamara and Frank Schettino on base in the fourth put Navy ahead momentarily. The Colonials then regained the lead when John Koniezewski and Bud Kiethley collected two baggers and Charles Heinbaugh contributed a single.

Again in the seventh, Navy forged ahead by one run, pinch-hitter Tom Higgins' doubling and scoring on a squeeze bunt by Watson Gillis. However, George Washington got this back on a walk, sacrifice and an error in the same round.

The defeat was Navy's fourth in six games and second at the Colonials' hands.

Terps Defeat Navy Ten, 9-2, End Season

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 12.—Maryland's lacrosse squad, concluding a brief campaign, today ruined Navy's debut, 9 to 2, although the Middies were the only crew during current season to tally more than one goal against the sturdy Old Liners.

Navy drew first blood, Capt. Bobby Booze driving a shot into the net during first three minutes. but Maryland's Ray Grelecki slipped home a corner shot 50 seconds later to tie score and end the first period goal making.

In the next quarter, however, the Old Liners flashed the form that carried them almost to the National Championship last spring, hammering five scores past Navy's defensemen. They held an 8-to-1 lead before the Middies tallied again on Gordon Ochenrider's shot in third stanza.

Boudreau Shakes Line-up as Team Loses Sixth In Row; Henshaw, Newhouser Mound Victors

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 12.—Twice the Detroit Tigers trimmed Cleveland today, 4 to 2 and 2 to 0, in a double-header necessitated by last night's 14-inning scoreless tie, and the Tribe's losing streak grew to six games.

Manager Lou Boudreau benched himself, Ray Mack and Roy Weatherly sending in Russ Peters at short, Oscar Grimes at second and Fabian Gaffke in center for the second contest. Hal Newhouser held Cleveland to five hits to score a shutout, however, while the Tigers were bombarding Joe Heving in an unaccustomed role as a starter.

Detroit tallied once in the third when Barney McCosky singled in Doc Cramer, and again in the fourth in a single by Ed Parsons.

In the opener, both Al Benton and Al Smith were chased from the mound, the latter departing when the pay-off came in the fifth on Murray Franklin's two-run single with the bases loaded. Roy Henshaw was the winning hurler.

McCoy's Fifth Flying Tackle Beats Himself

Ernie Dusek retired Bibber McCoy after 37 minutes of the feature wrestling match before 1200 of the faithful at Turner's Arena last night. Dusek, making his first appearance at the local parlor in four months, was aided by an overzealous flying tackle of the Bibber's which missed fire and propelled that ruffian through the ropes and onto the floor with a prodigous crash.

Just before the end came Ernie had been making McCoy's existence miserable with a head scissors. However, the Bostonian bounded out of the maneuver and spattered Dusek all over the premises with five successive flying tackles. The fifth tackle not only floored Dusek, but nailed Referee Casey Berger as well. Berger, who maneuvers with the finesse of a battleship, was clipped by Dusek as a repercussion of McCoy's antic.

Then Bibber tried a sixth tackle and plummeted through the ropes at a corner of the ring after striking his opponent a glancing swipe. With some aid he slowly climbed back to battle, but Dusek clamped the injured athlete with a hammerlock and the referee stopped the match.

Michele Leone and Jim Austeri, the asinine assassins, teamed to take the Potomac River Area two-man title from the favored Maurice LaChappelle and Ace Freeman, capturing the first and third of three falls.

This was one of the best tandem travesties of the season, and the winners must have read the script before the show went on for they were hard put to restrain visible mirth even before the whistle.

Herman Rhodes, a handsome newcomer, made short work of John Vanski with a series of slams and a crab hold in eight minutes, and Dick Lever and Abe Yourist worked to a strenuous draw in the opener.

winning the tenth but Miss Greiner won 11 and halved 12 and was in the advantageous position of holding a 2-hole lead with only six to play. Mrs. Stokes took stock of the situation at this point and in less time than it takes to tell it, won three straight holes. They halved the sixteenth, Miss Stokes 3-putted the seventeenth to delay the kill and then halved the eighteenth in par fours for the match. Mrs. Stokes posted a 39 for the back nine.

Mrs. Pray and Mrs. Schluderberg came to the eighteenth all even, both having come from behind at various stages during the first 17 holes. On the finishing par four Mrs. Pray was on the edge of the green in two and her rival short with her second. Mrs. Schluderberg approached about 3 feet from the pin, and Mrs. Pray, confronted by a partial stymie, banged her approach putt 6 feet past. The Baltimorean held the edge at this point, but Mrs. Pray made her putt first and Mrs. Schluderberg's trickled past the cup and it was all over.

Mrs. Walper used up only 12 putts for the first nine as she boasted a 5-up advantage over Mrs. Welch.

Early Given Praise By Nats' Manager

Mickey Vernon at first that caught Ted Williams off base, and in the ninth inning when Williams was on third with the tying run and only one out, was Williams surprised when Jake nipped him with a throw to Cullenbine.

Harris thinks that Early was indirectly the cause of the argument with Umpire Art Passarella at the plate during that ball game when Passarella ruled a pitch to Lou Finney a ball. "Everybody in the park except the umpire saw Finney swing at the pitch," says Harris.

It was on that pitch that Early caught Johnny Pesky stealing second. I honestly believe that Passarella was admiring Early's throw so much that he forgot Finney took a cut at the ball."

The Nats' didn't play the Athletics today, as scheduled — something called weather forced a postponement—they'll try it again tomorrow afternoon, when Early Wynn will take the mound. The Nats have won five in a row without any help from Alex Carrasquel, who owns a four-game winning streak, but hasn't figured in a ball game in nearly two weeks. Dutch Leonard will get his first workout since breaking his ankle when he pitches two or three innings Friday night in an exhibition game against the Trenton club, at Trenton.

Cards Held to 1 Hit By Wells of Hoyas

Slim Joe Wells allowed Catholic University only one hit yesterday as Georgetown University's baseball team won its sixth straight game in the D. C.-Maryland Summer League at Brookland in a game shortened to six innings by the weather. The score was 12-1.

After the teams had been delayed 10 minutes by showers in the third inning, Umpire Priest called off the affair with one out in the Georgetown half of the seventh in a downpour of rain.

Wells, a senior righthander who found himself on the sandlots last summer, was winning his fourth game of the summer season to head the Hoyas' crack mound staff. He fanned seven, walked three and the only run he yielded was unearned.

2 Hurlers Pounded

Bob DeBettencourt started for Catholic University and hurled well until the fifth when sloppy play and five base hits produced five runs for the Hoyas. Bernie Cody came in as relief with two outs in the inning and stayed around to be slugged for five runs in the sixth.

Stocky Joe Gyorgydeak, second baseman and cleanup hitter, knocked in five runs for Georgetown. With three mates on in the fifth, he cleared the bases with a ringing double to center. In the following inning Joe again found three Hoyas on the bags, and he responded with a line single to center that chased in a pair of tallies.

Hassett Suspended

Braves Drop Giants From Third, 1-0, 8-2

By International News Service

Boston, Aug. 12. — The Boston Braves knocked the New York Giants out of third place—a spot they had occupied overnight—with a double victory today, 1 to 0, and 8 to 2. The second game was played under official protest by the Giants who claimed Max West interfered with Mickey Witek on a fly ball by Phil Masi in the fifth inning.

Al Javery never allowed more than one New Yorker on base after the opening frame of the first contest as he outlasted Hard Luck Hal Schumacher. Tommy Holmes, a Brooklyn boy, knocked in the winning run in the fifth stanza with a single.

The victory was Javery's ninth of the season. Lou Tost scored his tenth win in the nightcap.

Capacity Crowd May See Paige Face Grays Nine Here Tonight

Negro American, National League Champs Stir Up Great Interest; Partlow to Pitch

Thirty-two thousand baseball fans may test the capacity of Griffith Stadium tonight at 8:30 o'clock when Satchelfoot Paige's Negro American League champion Kansas City Monarchs invade for a return game with the Washington Homestead Grays, Negro National League champions, under the lights.

The Monarchs, who have swept 13 consecutive games and who are ranked with the greatest clubs in Negro baseball's history, will send Paige, the highest paid pitcher in baseball, to the firing line for six innings and will relieve him with Hilton Smith, another outstanding moundsman, in the seventh inning.

Cunning Leroy Partlow, the Grays' youthful southpaw and the only pitcher to have defeated Kansas City twice this season, is scheduled to go the distance for the Grays.

The largest advance sale ever recorded for a Negro baseball game was reported yesterday afternoon as colored and white fans alike thrilled to tonight's contest. In a previous meeting involving these teams here this past June the Grays thrilled 26,113 paying customers by coming from behind in the tenth inning to edge Kansas City, 2-1, after both teams had played scoreless baseball for nine innings.

Whereas the last game resolved itself into a duel of pitchers and defensive brilliance, tonight's may develop into a slugging bee featuring long-distance hitters.

Josh Gibson, Homestead's 6-foot 1-inch, 215-pound catcher, considered by many the Babe Ruth of Negro baseball, will go behind the bat for the Grays and will be counted upon to supply most of the home team's punch.

Steel Priorities Changes Seen By Iron Age

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 12.—The Iron Age predicted today more changes would be made in the steel priorities setup and said the metals industries generally were struggling with "mounting confusion."

The Trade Journal said in its review of the week:

"Too many of the new AA super ratings were being loaded into the steel industry's hopper, indicating that their importance would decline in the same manner as preceding ratings which appeared high when issued. "In one recent action alone, thousands of tons of steel for warehouses were advanced to AA-3, putting the jobbers in a preferred position temporarily at least."

Plate Production Up

Iron Age said an experiment was planned in control of production and materials so raw material bills would be compared against contract requirements rather than having a manufacturer "making application for materials which no one knows whether he needs or not."

The magazine said shipments of steel to date this year showed curtailed sheet output with a sharp gain in plate production and a big increase in alloy steel.

"A year from now the steel industry is expected to have monthly finished steel capacity of 5,730,000 net tons, provided about 800,000 tons of steel can be found to complete the expansion program," Iron Age said. "Probably 300,000 tons of structural steel have been saved by the dropping of part of the enlargement plan."

It figured electric furnaces with annual capacity of more than 700,000 tons of alloy steel would come into production in the balance of 1942, that new blast furnaces would add 2,500,000 tons of pig iron capacity and that around 1,500,000 tons would be added to the Nation's open hearth capacity.

Scrap Supply Is Key

"The scrap supply situation, however," Iron Age commented, "is really the key to whether steel output holds up. The flow of scrap cannot be planned like mined raw materials. Mills are charging more scrap per heat because of the lower quality and are using more limestone and fluorspar than ever before to take care of impurities. Spar charges are up nearly 25 per cent in some heats.

"Probably scrap piles at plants over the Nation are 50 per cent lower than they were a year ago. One company which had a reserve pile of 100,000 tons a year ago is down to 10,000 tons today. Because of Lend-Lease shipments, less steel scrap is being returned than in normal times. In most districts the national scrap drive is getting results, but in some areas previoos drives have cleaned out the scrap.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—A feeble attempt was made in cotton futures trading today to extend the previous session's rally, but trade and mill buying failed to overcome liquidation and hedge selling and prices closed 10 to 30 cents a bale lower.

Other bearish factors were war news of an uncertain nature plus the Government's weekly weather report showing favorable crop conditions. Some cheer was derived from a large consumption estimate.

Railroads Free 114 Engines For War Use

By the Associated Press

The Office of Defense Transportation has reported that voluntary revisions in passenger schedules, services and equipment assignments by the principal passenger-carrying railroads resulted in the release of 114 locomotives and 533 passenger cars for the urgent needs of war traffic in the first six months of 1942.

A daily saving of 24,700 passenger train-miles and 176,000 passenger car-miles resulted from the revisions.

The figures were furnished by the Association of American Railroads.

The Office of Defense Transportation now is conducting a survey, in cooperation with various State public service commissions, with a view to eliminating duplicating service in local passenger trains and bus schedules in order to permit transfer of equipment from lightly patronized runs to others on which the need is greater.

The War Production Board said yesterday it was investigating operations of manufacturing users of iron and steel to determine the extent of compliance with restrictions on the use of these materials.

The OPA said its investigators would survey several hundred firms to determine their compliance with the order.

The Federal Communications Commission has ordered a questionnaire on the extent of the use of recordings and electrical transcriptions sent to all standard radio broadcasting stations.

The inquiry is in connection with the commission's investigation of cancellation of a proposed broadcast by high school musicians from Interlochen, Mich., as a result of a protest by James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians (A. F. of L.).

The information may be used also in connection with a ban ordered by Petrillo against members of the union playing for recordings for other than private use. This move by the union head resulted in a suit being filed at Chicago last week by the Government to enjoin enforcement of the order.

Average crude oil production in the United States increased 587,400 during the week and totaled 3,970,450 barrels daily, compared with 3,911,950 a year ago.

Farm Incomes Increase 46%, Costs One-Third

By the Associated Press

An Agriculture Department survey revealed that while net incomes of farm families averaged 46 per cent higher in 1941 and in the first three months of 1942 than in the comparable period in 1935-36, living costs had increased approximately one-third.

The survey, made by the Home Economics Bureau, cited a rapid rise in prices for things farmers bought in 1941, asserting "while they were practically at the 1935-36 level in January, 1941, they were 15 per cent higher by December."

Despite the increased cost of living, the report said, farm families put more than twice as much into savings in 1941 as they did in the 1935-36 period.

"It appears," the report continued, "that farm families as a group were enjoying more or a higher quality of goods and services in 1941 than in 1935-36. However, the 1941 levels of consumption, even of those goods still on the market, cannot be maintained in 1942 without increased expenditures."

Philippine Companies Get Debt Holiday

By the Associated Press

The Treasury yesterday clamped a moratorium on all debts of Philippine companies held in the United States.

Under the order, no Philippine individual or firm can pay any debts owed in this country except after getting special permission from the Treasury.

However, the Treasury made it clear that permission to pay the debts will be granted "only when enough assets are available in the United States to make a fair settlement with all the various creditors."

A Treasury statement explained that many Philippine companies which own valuable properties in the Japanese-invaded islands, have only very small amounts of cash and other assets in this country, and it would be impossible to treat all creditors fairly if these small amounts of assets were used.

It was indicated that in some cases the moratorium would be held until after the war. It does not apply, however, to the Philippine government which succeeded in sending substantial amounts of silver and gold to this country.

The Treasury statement added that the moratorium was "not to be used by any persons to avoid debts if they have assets available in this country."

Final Prices Mixed After Faltering Attempt at Improvement Late in Day

New York, Aug. 12.—Reverses to the Russian armies in the Caucasus failed to shake the stock market out of a narrow path today.

Final prices were mixed, though there was a faltering attempt at improvement late in the day which minimized some losses or changed them into gains.

News of the Solomon Islands battle, reported a market stimulant Tuesday, was almost totally lacking today, but financial tidings in at least one case came in as a factor in a market which lately has almost ignored such advices.

Chrysler, which got its first chance to react to the announcement of lower earnings and a dividend cut made late Tuesday, changed hands in big blocks at more than 2 points loss at the opening. It quieted to close off 1¾ points at 60.

A few low priced issues late in the day turned over in volume at higher prices, including Consolidated Oil and Warner Bros., at new tops for the year, and Aviation Corporation.

These contributed to the rise in the day's total sales to 283,058 shares. Though small, this was above Tuesday's figure of 258,610 shares. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was .1 of a point down at 36.3.

Commodity futures put on as undistinguished a performance as stocks. Changes were narrow all the way. Cotton at New York ended down 10 to 30 cents a bale. Chicago wheat lost ⅛ to ¾ cent a bushel, while corn was down ⅛ to up ¼. Hogs had a further 10-cent advance and now are within 5 cents of a 22-year high.

Rails and utilities were a bit active in the corporate bond market, some with small advances. U. S. Governments were about steady.

Gainers among big stocks included Bethlehem Steel, Woolworth, International Harvester, Douglas, Standard Oil (N. J.), Proctor & Gamble, Westinghouse and Eastman.

Lower at the final bell, though some were resistant at times, were Anaconda, Santa Fe, American Telephone, Pennsylvania, American Can, American Airlines, Johns Manville, du Pont and Paramount. U. S. Steel and General Motors were among a large contingent unchanged.

In the curb market a few leaders moved higher in a mixed market, including American Cyanamid "B," Electric Bond & Share, New Jersey Zinc and Venezuelan Petroleum. Sales were 41,505 shares, compared with 46,830 in the previous session.

Meat Packers Ask President For Protection

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 12.—More than 300 independent meat packers, meeting in an emergency conference, asked President Roosevelt today to take whatever action he deemed necessary "to save us from ruin caused by price ceilings on meat products with no ceilings on live animals, which are far above parity levels."

A telegram sent to the President by George A. Casey, chairman, of the emergency conference, declared:

"Our Senators and Congressmen have pleaded in vain with the Price Administrator and with the Secretary of Agriculture, but these distinguished officials cannot agree on policy . . .

"Independent meat packers produce nearly half of all meat products. The Secretary of Agriculture acknowledges that continued operation of our plants is essential to the war effort yet many are closing down or severely curtailing operations . . .

"Reliably informed Price Administrator has this week recommended to Secretary of Agriculture fixing of ceilings on live animals, but latter does not agree. Situation critical and injurious both to war production effort and morale of whole industry and its labor. Executive action urgently necessary."

Eastman Sales Increase 33%, Earnings Drop

By the Associated Press

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Eastman Kodak Co., reporting a 33 per cent increase in sales for the six-month period ending June 13, disclosed today that because of tax provisions net profit declined to $7,462,336 or $2.94 per share of common against $10,460,425 and $4.15 in comparable 1941.

Earlier the company announced a quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share on the common stock, a reduction of 25 cents for the first time since April 1, 1938. The regular $1.50 quarterly payment on preferred also was voted, both payable October 1 to stock of record September 5.

Net operating profit increased 48 per cent from $19,989,337 in 1941 to $29,538,732 but, in a statement, the board noted "This improvement was more than offset by the provision for income and excess profits taxes amounting to $20,853,706 against $9,792,474 for the six periods of 1941."

Federal taxes were calculated by using a rate of 45 per cent for the combined normal tax and surtax, and 90 per cent for the excess-profits tax.

In addition, $1,800,000 was deducted from profits as a reserve to take care of possible future inventory losses and "other future adjustments due to wartime conditions."

Total six-month sales amounted to $97,839,272 compared to $73,328,058 in 1941 which the company credited to higher sales to the Government and larger sales of acetate rayon and plastic moulding compounds.

"Production for war uses of photographic goods and special military apparatus and equipment is continuing at a greatly accelerated rate," the board's statement declared.

Power Production Declines Slightly

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Electric energy production after rising through July, declined in the week ended August 8 to 3,637,070,000 kilowatt hours, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The drop, from the previous week's 3,649,146,000 kilowatthours, left energy output still far above that of the comparable 1941 week, when the total was 3,233,242,000 kilowatthours.

Pacific Coast and Southern States industries continued to use far more electricity than last year, the western region showing a gain of 24.4 per cent over 1941 and the Southern States 23.5 per cent.

For the country as a whole production of electricity was up 12.5 per cent from a year earlier.

Stockholder's Right To Books Limited

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—A stockholder's right of access to the books of a corporation will henceforth be limited in the interests of national safety, Col. Richard A. McGee, chairman of the recently organized committee for protection of information, told a gathering of trade association representatives today. He spoke at a luncheon during the War Production Board's three-day training conference.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP).—The wheat market's attempt to extend its feeble recovery finale out today after price gains of ½ to ¾ cent had been posted.

These gains appeared in the first few minutes, apparently the result of small milling trade purchases and a paucity of selling orders. During the remainder of the session there were nervous fluctuations and prices closed ⅛@¼ lower than yesterday. September 1.17⅛@1.17¼. December 1.20¾. Brokers said buying power was not maintained in sufficient volume to absorb moderate hedging sales.

Other grains fluctuated with wheat although corn and oats, feeding cereals, developed weakness first. Corn closed ⅛ off to ¼ higher, September 86⅛, December 88¾. Oats ⅛@⅜ lower. Rye unchanged to ⅛ off, and soybeans ⅛@1¼ higher.

We can't do better than to tell you something about the good work "Thus We Live," the dramatic series which you hear over WJSV and the Columbia network every Thursday and Friday at 9:45 a. m., is doing than to quote from the current issue of the Red Cross Courier.

Says the Courier: "We know that 'Thus We Live' is doing a job. We know it's interesting a lot of people in Red Cross work who never before had such an interest. Here's a bit of proof:

"One of the old time members of the Chicago chapter's board of directors declares that he learns more about the real workings of the Red Cross through 'Thus We Live' than he'd ever known before. A member of the St. Louis board thinks the programs are so good that he'd like to have all his chapter officials study each script as a text on the subject covered. Prize proof of all are the thousands of letters from strangers to the Red Cross who listen to the program and then write national headquarters for advice on how they can serve . . .

"You might be interested to know that the series is considered near the top of the heap among daytime programs of its kind on the air We're proud of 'Thus We Live.'

"The Red Cross story is told vividly and excitingly in dramatizations that carry a punch as well as a lesson, and the interviews (by Arch McDonald of WJSV) that come straight from our very own studio here at national headquarters are the sort of interesting talks by Red Cross officials you might expect to hear if you set down and talked to them in their own homes."

Contract Bridge

"I have been having my troubles with bidding. Just when I thought I was becoming more proficient, however, a new situation arose which I was unable to solve," writes F. O. S.

"It was in a rubber bridge game and the player to my left opened the bidding with one club, which my partner doubled. Third hand redoubled. Never having encountered this situation before, I passed in confusion. Will you please tell me what action a player should take when his partner's take-out double is redoubled? I play the Culbertson system."

F. O. S. has uncovered a controversial bidding question on which authorities disagree. Here are Culbertson's latest comments on the subject:

"For years (until 1941) a pass by the doubler's partner in this position was a penalty pass and showed strength. This meaning was given to the pass in defense against psychic redoubles which were often made on hands like this:

◇ Q J 10 9
♣ 7 6 4
♠ 9 4 3

"Psychic redoubles have now, like almost all psychic bids, fallen out of use, and the pass can be given a more natural meaning. In this situation:

South	West	North	East
1♡	Dble	Redble	?

"East should now act almost as though North's redouble were a bid. In other words, with a weak hand East should usually pass; any bid he makes is in the nature of a free bid. That is, however, subject to these reservations:

"1. With a five-card suit and about half an honor trick in his hand, or with a six-card suit no matter how weak his hand, East should bid his suit.

"2. Being warned that both opponents have fairly strong hands, the doubler's partner does not make a jump response over th eredouble without about two honor tricks and a fairly strong five-card or longer suit.

"3. A response of one no trump still shows a strong hand (never less than one honor trick), but it should not be made over the redouble without a stopper in the opponent's suit."

J. G. Schurman, Former Envoy To Berlin, Dies

Jacob Gould Schurman, former Ambassador to Germany and one-time president of Cornell University, died yesterday at Memorial Hospital, New York City. He was 88 years old.

SCHURMAN

Dr. Schurman was in Berlin from 1925 to December, 1929, after which he retired from public life.

After devoting more than 30 years to Cornell University as professor and president, Dr. Schurman turned from the field of education to achieve distinction in the diplomatic service of the United States.

On Philippine Commission

During his administration at Cornell, which extended over 28 years, he frequently accepted temporary assignments in public service which included the presidency of the first United States-Philippine Commission in 1899 and Minister to Greece and Montenegro during the last year of the term of President Taft.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 4 p. m. at St. Matthews Church in Bedford, Westchester County, N. Y., with burial in the church cemetery.

Dr. Schurman was the father-in-law of Brig. Gen. John Magruder, now stationed in Washington. Another daughter, Barbara Petro-Pavlovsky, wife of Maj. Vladimir Petro-Pavlovsky of the British Army, is on the Gripsholm, the ship carrying Allied citizens from the Orient under diplomatic exchange.

Other survivors are his two sons, Judge Jacob Gould Schurman of the New York Court of General Sessions and George M. Schurman of Bedford Hills, N. Y., and a third daughter, Mrs. Robert Hawes of Washington.

Before he took his diplomatic assignment to Germany, Dr. Schurman served as United States Minister to China from 1920 to 1924.

When Dr. Schurman went to the Philippines in 1899 conditions were turbulent because of the aftermath of the campaign in the archipelago as part of the Spanish-American War, and his service in the Near East was coincident with the disturbed period of the Balkan Wars, forerunner of the World War. Civil unrest and revolution were rampant most of the four years he spent in China.

In all of these Dr. Schurman represented his country and its interests in a creditable manner and was rewarded with promotion to the rank of Ambassador when the post at Berlin became vacant.

Friend of Hindenburg

He became the friend and confidant of the late President von Hindenburg of Germany, and in 1934 Dr. Schurman disclosed a conversation he had with the exiled leader on the subject of dispelling hatred against the Jews.

Summoned to a friendly chat with von Hindenburg, during his visit to Berlin in 1933, Dr. Schurman obtained the aged leader's permission to speak frankly and then broached the Jewish question.

"I told him there was serious danger that it (the anti-Semitic campaign) would nullify to a considerable extent the restoration of friendly relations between Germany and the United States for which we had both worked so hard."

Dr. Schurman received a broad education which began in the schools of Freetown, Prince Edward Island, where he was born May 22, 1854. He went with a Canadian Gilchrist scholarship to the University of London where he earned the degree of bachelor of arts and master of arts.

Dr. Schurman was only 38 years old when he was elected as the third president of Cornell University. That institution still attributes much of its present development to work directed and planned by him during the 28 years he was its administrative head.

During that time Dr. Schurman took an active interest in public affairs in New York State and in the Nation, and was a close student of international events. He served as vice president of the New York State Constitutional convention of 1915 and later was a member of the State food commission. He was one of the advisers of President Harding with respect to the League of Nations covenant and energetically opposed the United States joining the league with the famous Article X as part of the document.

Honorary degrees were conferred upon Dr. Schurman by virtually all the universities in the United States and abroad at which he had studied. As an author he added considerably to philosophical and historical literature, his published works including: "Kantian Ethics and Ethics of Evolution," "Belief in God," "Agnosticism and Religion," "The Balkan Wars," and "Why America Is In the War."

W. J. Rapp, 'Confessions' Editor, Dies

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 12.—William Jourdan Rapp, who proved that millions were interested in other people's sins—and willing to pay millions to read about their repentance—is dead.

Rapp, who spent 16 years reading the confessions of repentant sinners as the highly paid and widely known editor of True Story Magazine, died today of a heart attack at his summer home near Lake Mohonk, N. Y.

Into his 47 years he crowded careers as a bacteriologist, radio producer, Broadway playwright, journalist and editor-evangelist, but his deepest interest lay in recording the lives of ordinary people, in tales told in their own words.

When he resigned as editor last March, after helping to develop the magazine as the gold mine of MacFadden publications, Rapp declared he had witnessed a gradual change in the confessing masses from preoccupation with sex to "social consciousness."

Rapp said he regarded himself as an evangelist with a pulpit open to millions, and month after month on his editorial page he pounded steadily at the theme that sinners must suffer to grow, repent in order to learn from their misdeeds.

Finally he decided to enter the religious field directly, and so he shifted a few months before his death to a job as editor of religious publications for the Cook Publishing Co. of Elgin, Ill.

Before the first world conflict Rapp was a New York City milk inspector and bacteriologist. He went to Europe in the Army Medical Corps, operated a mobile laboratory to test water supplies for American troops in France, then served as a health consultant in the Near East.

Later he was a featur writer for the New York Times, a consultant on the Near East, a dramatic producer of N. B. C. and C. B. S. serial shows, and author of numerous plays and novels. Among his plays were "Harlem," which had a long Broadway run in 1930; "Whirlpool," "Hilda Cassidy" and "Substitute for Murder."

Sergt. Younger Buried Near Unknown Soldier He Selected

A sergeant of World War I, who selected the dead hero whose body was to be enshrined for all time as America's Unknown Soldier, was buried yesterday in Arlington Cemetery, not far from the tomb of the nameless doughboy.

His name was Edward Younger, and 21 years ago he received a distinction that was to forever link his name with the symbol of a fighting America—he was told to select the Unknown Soldier.

Younger entered a darkened chapel in the French village of Chalons-Sur-Marne in which lay four caskets containing the bodies of unidentified American dead. He was told to lay a red rose on one of them, thus choosing the dead hero whose memory the Nation would honor forever.

Younger, a postal employe in Chicago where he died last Thursday of a heart attack, once said that he had a feeling the dead soldier he chose was someone he had known. "A voice seemed to say, 'This is a pal of yours'."

Following services in Chicago the body of Younger was brought here for burial near the tomb of the soldier he selected for immortality. At the graveside Capt. E. J. Gracey, Catholic chaplain at Fort Myer, read the committal service and said these final words:

"And may the souls of all the faithful departed, through the mercy of God, rest in peace."

A firing party of eight men, directed by one of Younger's war buddies, now Lieut. Marty Ball, fired three volleys. A bugler sounded taps.

John Douw Dies; Former Mayor Of Annapolis

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Aug. 12.—Col. John de Douw, one-time Annapolis mayor and Anne Arundel County civilian defense director, died today in Annapolis Emergency Hospital.

Colonel Douw, 69, underwent an operation Monday night for an acute gall bladder condition.

Last month he was the center of a controversy about Anne Arundel County's participation in an all-night blackout, July 15. Colonel Douw adamantly refused to order the county to participate although Baltimore and 22 other counties had agreed to participate. Later, he agreed to go along with the rest of the State.

Following the war, he returned to Annapolis and in 1904 joined the Maryland National Guard, eventually becoming a lieutenant colonel. In 1905, he was elected mayor of Annapolis. During the last war he was a major.
